UCS Advises 4 D. C. Child Agencies To Combine

Chest Money Denied Two Health 'Funds'; Jelleff Again Heads Welfare Services

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

United Community Services yesterday gave the public a new slant on what it plans to do about Washington's private welfare problems by these actions:

It told four child welfare agencies they should consolidate to render more effective service.

It promised an investigation into health needs, and denied money to two "funds" which it felt did not meet this need.

It told one agency its work could be done by public tax money, and warned the group no Chest money would be forthcoming after next year.

It warned another agency to consolidate its children's work with a non-Chest agency to promote efficiency.

Jelleff Is Reelected

These actions were taken at a meeting of the UCS Board of Trustees, which unanimously reelected Frank R. Jelleff as its president and approved all recommendations advanced by the UCS admissions and review committee.

Consolidation, perhaps even a merger, has already been agreed to by trustees of three of the four child welfare agencies which UCS wants combined. These are Children's Country Home, Children's Protective Association, and the Foster Day Care Counseling Association. They will present a plan to UCS by March 1.

The fourth group, the Washington Home for Foundlings, objected to the merger plan. It will get Chest support for 1950, but must study ways to reduce costs of handling infants.

Cut Off from 1950 Funds

UCS cut off the Special Diagnostic Fund and Dental Fund from 1950 funds because it said they were "set up for public relations reasons primarily." It also promised a special study of health problems to see to what extent they are not being met.

Pending the study, it also denied a request for 1950 funds from the Washington Committee for Education on Alcoholism.

The Child Welfare Society was warned it will not receive Chest support after June 30, 1950, since most of the society's program can be met by tax (U. S. Public Health Service) funds, and since the society has other resources.

UCS admitted Episcopal Home for Children to 1950 support, but asked the home to consider consolidating with St. John's Orphanage, a non-Chest Episcopal home for children, which is doing similar work.

Hewing to its "putting all our begs in one ask-it," UCS turned down a request by the Boy Scouts of America, National Capital Area Council, to allow it to seek extra funds if the Chest campaign falls below its goal.

UCS admitted the Washington Criminal Justice Association to 1950 support, but wondered whether the association might not be duplicating FBI work with its statistics, and what the association's role was "in the area of social action." UCS asked a report by March 1.

The Ionia R. Whipper Home (for unwed Negro mothers) was voted into UCS membership, but a request for funds was held up while UCS studies most effective ways of providing this care.

Miss Coplon Found Guilty as Spy; Dry-Eyed, Protests Innocence

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

AFTER THE VERDICT—Arms around each other, Judith Coplon and her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Coplon, maintain their composure in this picture made in their hotel last night. Miss Coplon, found guilty as a spy, reiterated, tearlessly, "All I can say is that I am innocent."

Jurors Recite Verdict 38 Times; Palmer Announces He Will Appeal

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Judith Coplon, Government girl, yesterday was found guilty as a spy against her country and for Russia.

Not a tear escaped her eyes. Not a finger shook. No cry, no slightest sound at all broke to expose the thoughts or feelings of the defendant as the word "Guilty . . . Guilty . . . Guilty" echoed from the jurors in merciless cadence through District Court.

Her mind remained locked to the bitter end.

It was a thing infinitely more moving than the tumultuous emotions which had burst from the tiny, 28-year-old woman.

Thus complete was her lockout of what was going on, and had gone on, inside her.

When she had left the court building, a bug flew into her eye as she passed under a tree. She brought a handkerchief to her eye to get it out. A score of cameramen flared up to photograph her, since the gesture might suggest crying. Instantly she snapped the handkerchief down and left her eye to blink painfully rather than convey such a suggestion.

The verdict that came a few minutes before means that she faces a maximum of 13 years' imprisonment. She may be sentenced today, though the defense has asked that sentencing be deferred until after her trial in New York on another charge of conspiracy to commit espionage.

Chin in hand, fingers spread over cheek, the former Justice Department employe watched her jurors out of dark eyes as the word came over and over again from their lips.

A total of 38 times the word fell on her ears, for the defense asked that the jury be polled individually on each count, after each juror already had stated his verdict in chorus, and the foreman had done so twice.

"Guilty . . . Guilty," telephone repairman, meat cutter, sheet metal worker, housewife, Government employe repeated from the jury box.

"No comments, no comments," the Barnard College honor graduate kept repeating as reporters swarmed over her at session's end. "I don't want to say anything. . . . It's silly, isn't it, but I really don't want to say anything."

Only later for the newsreels she repeated formally her frequent statement, "I am innocent."

Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer announced he would appeal.

It was at 2:10 p. m. that the jury reported it had reached a verdict. It was 26 hours and 58 minutes after it had begun deliberations.

"Hold in line! Hold in line!" marshals shouted to spectators.

First into the courtroom from this line were a GI and his woman companion come to learn the fate

Dulles Urged Hiss to Quit Carnegie Job

Says He Advised It To Save Group 'Embarrassment'; Defense Rests

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, June 30.—Barred from introducing psychiatric testimony to challenge Whittaker Chambers' mental stability—but stressing that contention to the jury—Alger Hiss' attorneys rested the defense case in his perjury trial at 2:15 p. m. today.

The Government immediately began calling rebuttal witnesses to the stand in rapid order, bringing up new ammunition for its charges that Hiss lied in denying he worked with Chambers in a Communist spy ring in 1938.

Countering attacks on Chambers' credibility with what was intended as an attack on Hiss' credibility, the prosecution brought to the stand, under subpena, John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign policy expert.

Dulles testified that in a memorandum he once stated he told Hiss, just after Chambers' accusations last August, that he should resign as president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace to save that group from "embarrassment."

"Usefulness Impaired"

But Dulles, chairman of the board of the endowment and a United States delegate to the United Nations, today gave a varying account of his August, 1948, discussion with Hiss, which left the prosecution, defense and Judge Samuel H. Kaufman disputing what he meant.

As one who had been instrumental in getting Hiss to leave the State Department and join the endowment February 1, 1947, Dulles said, on August 18 he discussed with Hiss the Communist charges made by Chambers two weeks earlier.

Dulles said they decided Hiss' "permanent usefulness" to the group had been "impaired."

With no present recollection of who broached the specific subject, Dulles said today, they "agreed . . . it would not be wise" for Hiss to resign while the House Committee on Un-American Activities was continuing. Hiss, he said, "contemplated resigning some time in September."

In his testimony here last Tuesday, Hiss denied that Dulles had asked him to resign, or that he told Dulles he wanted to postpone the resignation until the hearing ended.

Submits Resignation

Hiss submitted his resignation at the December, 1948, meeting of the endowment's trustees. They did not accept it, but granted him a leave of absence with pay from the $20,000-a-year post. In May, this year, he notified them he was not a candidate for reelection. He still is a trustee.

Hiss also denied Tuesday that he told Dulles before joining the endownment that he had "satisfied" the FBI that he was not a Communist, or that he told Dulles in the 1930s he had been "thrown into casual association with some persons who had Communist sympathies."

Both these statements were in the same memorandum Dulles said he prepared for the endowment's

Union, Firm To Abide by Decision of Board of 5

Early Morning Vote at Arena Mass Meeting Prevents Walkout of 4300

By Sam Stavisky and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Capital Transit streetcars and buses will roll today.

A strike of 4300 AFL workers was headed off in the early morning hours at a mass membership meeting in Turner's Arena with union acceptance of a Government-proposed arbitration formula.

Several hours earlier, the formula, suggested by Cyrus W. Ching, director of the United States Mediation and Conciliation Service, had been accepted by Capital Transit.

Although union leaders strongly urged acceptance of the formula at the mass meeting, there was considerable opposition. A mixture of cheers and boos swelled in the arena when the plan was outlined.

Convulsed in Confusion

A standing vote was taken at 1 a. m., but it was impossible to tell whether the proposal had been accepted or rejected. The arena was convulsed in confusion. However, enough order had been restored when the second vote was taken at 1:25 a. m. that the proposal clearly carried.

Union and company negotiators tentatively agreed to terms of Ching's formula at an eleventh-hour meeting yesterday at the Labor Department which lasted until 7:30 p.m.

It provided for arbitration of the current contract dispute in accordance with the principle of the arbitration provision in the union-company contract which expired at last midnight.

The arbitration will be by a 5-man board, one member to be appointed by each side, the other three to be selected from a panel of seven named by Ching. This will give each side the right to disqualify two of the seven named by Ching.

Present Agreement Extended

It also was agreed that pending arbitration, the present agreement will be extended and any change in wage rates will be retroactive to July 1.

At about 11 p. m., Capital Transit's President E. D. Merrill sent a letter to headquarters of Capital Transit and Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL).

The letter, addressed to William Simms, president of Division 689, said in part:

"I am sending you a memorandum of the understanding we reached this date in Mr. Ching's office which I have signed on your assurance that your committee will urge and recommend this for adoption at the meeting this evening and that you believe will be adopted."

More Than 3500 Present

The union meeting, attended by more than 3500 union members, was to have started at 12:01 a. m. At 12:10 a. m., the members began clapping hands and stamping feet, demanding that the meeting open.

It did not open until 12:18 a. m., immediately after the arrival of Simms.

Eli Oliver, union attorney, then outlined the history of the contract negotiations. He said the company's original proposal to arbitrate was of such a nature that it "clearly meant loading the dice a bit" in the company's favor.

The new arbitration plan, he said, was proposed by Ching and his assistants, one of them James Holden, the regional Federal mediator who was first assigned to the dispute.

See Union Protected

The plan, Oliver said, "in every respect protects the interest of the union." He then outlined the plan and said it had been recommended unanimously by the union's 15-member contract committee.

When he first explained that the arbitration would be entrusted to a 5-man board, there was a resounding "no" from the union members. He kept hammering

D. C. Workers Assured of Pay Increase

18,000 to Benefit By Completion Of Legislation

Eighteen thousand District employes were assured their $330 retroactive pay increase by these actions yesterday:

1. President Truman signed the bill carrying the pay raise for District teachers, police, firemen, and per diem employes.

2. The Senate passed and sent to the President the separate bill carrying the $330 pay raise for District classified employes and Foreign Service personnel.

3. District officials forwarded to the Budget Bureau for transmission to Congress a deficiency appropriation request for about four million dollars to pay the retroactive part of the increase.

Senate approval for the District classified pay increase, previously passed by the House, was given by a voice vote at the request of Senate Civil Service Committee Chairman Johnston (D., S. C.).

President Truman's signing of the unclassified pay bill yesterday ended a major worry for 559 temporary District school teachers. They get the raise because he signed it the last day they were on the payroll, the end of the fiscal year. They are off the payroll today, but still get the retroactive increase since that applies to all who were on the payroll at the time the bill became law.

The pay increases are retroactive to last July when the $330 was given Federal civil service employes, but denied to the District workers for lack of city revenue.

For their back pay, District employes will have to await congressional approval of the four-million-dollar deficiency, District officials said.

As for the future increase, officials said the first month's installment on the $330 additional pay for the coming year will generally be found in pay checks for the first pay period beginning this month.

Lewis Orders 3-Day Week For Soft Coal

Mine Owners Say Move Is 'Illegal'; Far West Unaffected

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 30 (AP).—John L. Lewis today ordered his soft coal miners to work only three days a week temporarily. The operators promptly called the action "illegal."

The United Mine Workers' president got around his traditional "no contract, no work" policy by taking it on himself to order the short work week rejected by the operators.

The contracts covering 400,000 miners expire at midnight.

All union mines east of the Mississippi are included in the order to work on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday each week. However, the work days will be Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next week because the miners' 10-day vacation ends after Monday.

Lewis gave no reason for excluding the Far Western mines, which produce about 20 million tons annually.

George H. Love of Pittsburgh, head of the North-West operators with whom Lewis has been negotiating here, called the three-day week illegal. The operators fear it violates the antitrust laws, he said.

Love said he is not certain the operators would or could take any court action.

The operator spokesman said the mine owners would keep their pits open for any who want to work on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The conference of Lewis and operators of the North and West recessed until July 12.

The operators say their contract continues until August 14, under a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act requiring 60 days' notice be-

Senate Votes '100 Pct. Taft' Labor Bill

Truman Promises To Continue Fight For T-H Act Repeal

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday approved a "100 per cent Taft" labor bill, preserving the substance and even the name of the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Relations Act.

The 51-to-42 vote clearly blocked the drive to repeal the law at this session, but President Truman called for the battle to go on.

He said he will continue to make the hardest kind of fight to redeem the Democratic Party's Taft-Hartley repeal pledge.

House leaders, whose original bill was pushed back into committee, withheld comment on the Senate vote for the time being.

But Representative Kelley (D., Pa.), chairman of a House Labor subcommittee, trying to write another bill, agreed with the President.

"The House ought to try to pass a better bill," Kelley said. "We certainly couldn't write a worse one."

The legislative odds are that neither Taft's program nor the Administration's can become law this session.

Even if the House acts before adjournment, chances that the Senate will concur in a bill the President could sign appeared virtually nil.

Compromise Reached

Marshall Plan Nations Agree On European Finance Plan

Paris (Friday), July 1 (U.P.).—The 19-nation Marshall Plan council agreed in principle on a new plan for financing European trade at 2 a. m. today.

The trade agreement under which the ERP countries have been operating ended officially two hours earlier, at midnight.

The new agreement is a compromise between British and American views. It provides that 25 per cent of the credits which the Marshall Plan nations grant each other can be used anywhere throughout the group instead of merely between one country and another. The United States insisted on this. The other 75 per cent can be spent only in the country where it is made available.

Belgium—Europe's biggest creditor nation—agrees to make up to $87,500,000 worth of Belgian franc credits available to other European countries in order to step up trade.

Britain, France and The Netherlands will benefit most from Belgian credits, which will consist of 25-year loans at 2½ per cent interest.

Belgium also agreed that not more than 40 million dollars worth of credits granted each other by the Marshall Plan group can be spent in Belgium.

Financial experts from the 19 nations which make up the Organization for European Economic Cooperation scheduled a meeting for 5 p. m. today to draft the broad agreement into writing.

Seven top financial experts, including Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps, and French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche, had conferred throughout yesterday and last night.

W. Averell Harriman, American roving Ambassador to the Marshall Plan countries, attended to outline the United States position.

The original U. S. proposal would have let the ERP nations transfer a portion of their dollar credits to one another, and convert some of their earnings under the program into dollars.

Britain had opposed the plan unless it received airtight guarantees against a drain on badly depleted dollar and gold reserves.

Trade Act Extension Still Idle in Senate

The reciprocal trade agreements authority first given to a President in 1934, when it was bestowed upon the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, moved into a state of suspension at 12:01 a. m. today, with neither the White House nor the State Department protesting the failure of Congress so far to extend it with a new enactment.

Officer Wins, Stork Places, Ambulance Driver Shows

A police accident investigation unit car, with siren wide open, drove as pacemaker for the stork yesterday morning and beat the bird by 2 minutes.

Corpl. Michael S. McCarthy of AIU, saw Lawrence Ryan, 204 37th st. sw., at 6:10 a. m. in the street at Riverdale dr. and New Hampshire ave. nw., waving his arms frantically.

Ryan told Corporal McCarthy he was on his way to Bethesda Naval Hospital with his wife, who was in labor. But his car radiator had boiled dry.

McCarthy went into action. He radioed for a Navy ambulance to meet the party at the District line. He found some water and put it into Ryan's car. He then led the way.

But at Wisconsin ave. and the District line, where the ambulance was waiting, he didn't dare stop for a transfer. Even in his police car he could hear wings swooshing as the stork came in for a landing.

So he signaled Ryan to follow and kept going. The cavalcade, with the ambulance a bad third, arrived at the hospital at 6:45 a. m. The Navy was ready.

At 6:47 a. m. Mrs. Betty Ryan, 22, was delivered of a daughter, 6 pounds, 8¾ ounces. Mother and baby were reported doing fine.

McCarthy and Ryan are doing only as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

3 Plans Offered to Relieve Negro High School Crowding

Three alternative plans to relieve "particularly acute" overcrowding in Negro high schools in Washington yesterday were offered to the Board of Education by Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools.

All three, read before the board's committee on school buildings and grounds, aimed at relieving immediately the jammed condition of Cardozo High School, Ninth st. and Rhode Island ave. nw.

All involve shifts of all or part of the student body of Cardozo and also involve shifts of all or parts of the student bodies of present schools for white students.

The three plans are:

1. Move the entire Cardozo student body temporarily to the present Central High School, at 13th and Clifton sts. nw., and shift present senior and junior high students from Central to other schools also on a temporary basis. Leave Cardozo vacant pending construction of a new Cardozo building.

2. Move the entire student body of Cardozo to Central High permanently and transfer the Central students permanently to other schools. Leave Cardozo vacant, as in Plan 1.

3. Move the entire student body of Wilson Teachers College, 11th and Harvard sts. nw., to Central High along with the present senior student body there. Then shift a part of the Cardozo student body

Budget Approved For Montgomery

Montgomery County's government appropriations of $7,907,574 for 1949-50, supported by a $1.90 tax rate—two-cents increase—were formally voted yesterday by the County Council.

At the same time, the council finally agreed to reduce the special suburban district tax from 31 cents to 20 cents.

The budget was approved after a day-long conference on the last day of the fiscal year, at which Mrs. Durward V. Sandifer, Board of Education president, caused momentary confusion with an unexpected request for additional funds.

Funds Overestimated

The 11th-hour plea was necessary, Mrs. Sandifer explained, because school officials had overestimated by $185,000 the amount of funds to come from the State.

School officials also were notified only Tuesday, she said, that the State had withdrawn an expected $10,000 for transportation of some 2200 kindergarten children in the county as well as $4800 for a special class for handicapped children.

Because of the overestimate, she said, a $25,000 appropriation for Montgomery Junior College also would not be available.

Anticipating the school board overestimates the council on Tuesday tentatively provided for $188,500 to offset them as well as to finance the Junior College appropriation and other services.

Mrs. Sandifer told the council that the additional appropriation would "do no more than offset the overestimate." Members deliberated for several hours before allocating $185,000 to make allowance for the overestimate and an addition $25,000 for the Junior College.

"Up to the School Board"

Council President Frederic P. Lee said no action was taken on the apparent shortage of $10,000 for transportation of kindergarten pupils and $4800 for the handicapped children.

"It's up to the School Board to find money for these two items," he declared. To its already announced tentative budget the council added a total of $50,000 yesterday, explaining that the extra money was expected from county liquor board receipts which had been underestimated by the council.

Another last minute addition was creation of a $24,611 fund that will be reserved for emergency use.

As finally adopted, the budget includes $6,040,000 for capital expenditures with $5,040,000 for new school construction and $770,000 for road and drainage construction.

This year's county operating budget total of $7,907,574 represents an increase of $1,372,328 over last year's total of $6,535,246.

Tax Judge Backed for 12-Yr. Term

By The Associated Press

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday recommended that the Senate confirm Miss Marion J. Harron, Berkeley, Calif., for a new 12-year term as a member of the United States Tax Court.

The committee did not announce the vote.

Chairman George (D., Ga.), told reporters the committee was sending the nomination to the Senate with a "favorable" recommendation. He said it would be accompanied by a "special report."

Asked what the report would say, George replied: "You will have to wait until you get it."

It was learned, however, that the report probably will contain some comments on the way Miss Harron has handled her court assignment.

The tax section of the American Bar Association has opposed her nomination on grounds that she is not fitted for the post because she lacks judicial temperament.

A number of other attorneys testified in her favor at committee hearings.

FTC Nominee Says He Backs Profit System

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

John Carson, nominated by President Truman to the Federal Trade Commission last April, yesterday told the Senate Commerce Committee he believes in free enterprise in busintss.

The committee is considering the appointment.

Carson said a statement he made before a congressional committee in 1945 was "a campaign speech." In that testimony he said that "the world of competitive profit capitalism began to have its death rattles in 1929 and it has been in convulsions ever since."

"Campaign Material"

"You use your words loosely," Senator Brewster (R., Me.) remarked to Carson.

"Like we all do in campaigns," Carson replied, "cooperative campaign material is similar to political campaign material." Carson is executive secretary of the National Cooperative League.

The two-hour questioning of Carson by Brewster was concerned mainly with statements Carson has made before other congressional bodies and with his political affiliations.

Carson admitted he had not voted since 1912—"maybe in 1916." He had tried to register in Michigan in 1924, he said, but couldn't because he hadn't lived there long enough.

Tells of Last Vote

The only votes he ever had cast, he said, were in 1912 to 1916, and then he was a Democrat. Today, he testified, he is neither a Republican nor a Democrat. He said he thought he was mostly a Republican because he once had been an assistant to Senator Couzens of Michigan, a Republican.

That part of the testimony was important. If Carson is a Democrat he is barred from the post on FTC. The law says only three members of the five-man board may belong to the same party. There already are three Democrats on the commission.

Carson's fitness for the job was attacked by a member of the Ohio Legislature, Elton Kile. Kile is president of the Ohio State Associated Businessmen and also president of the National Associated Businessmen.

Magazine Story Quoted

"Carson has publicly proposed repudiation of part of the national debt," Kile declared. "He urged creation of a new nonprofit society to replace the free enterprise system; he says the competitive profit system has been dying since 1929."

Kile then quoted from a magazine article about Carson:

"He's the kind of a man who'll conceivably run the whole Federal Trade Commission nuts—Lowell Mason execepted."

The hearing will be resumed next Thursday.

New York, June 30 (AP).—The Roman Catholic population of the United States, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands has reached 26,718,343, an increase of 642,646 over last year, the official Catholic Directory for 1949 said today.

President Signs GSA Bill, Names Larson Director

President Truman yesterday signed into law a bill setting up a new central agency to handle procurement, property management and other "housekeeping" functions of the Federal Government.

He named Jess Larson, head of the War Assets Administration, to be director of the new "General Services Administration."

Congress wrote into the bill a requirement that "a fair proportion of all procurement shall be placed with small business firms."

Mr. Truman in a letter called Larson's attention particularly to this section, and instructed him not to permit "the natural desire for flexibility and speed in procurement" to lead the agency into excessive buying from large concerns.

He noted that Larson will have the power to negotiate some purchase contracts instead of advertising for bids, and said he was relying on the administrator's "discretion" to see that this power was used sparingly and delegated to subordinates in a way that "it may be promptly withdrawn when necessary."

Msgr. Lardone Made Titular Archbishop

The Most Rev. Francesco Lardone, for 25 years a member of the Catholic University faculty, was consecrated Archbishop yesterday in a colorful and elaborate ceremony at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Shrine, on the university campus, was filled with some 1200 persons as Monsignor Lardone became Titular Archbishop of Rhizaeum. He will be Apostolic Nuncio to Haiti and the Domican Republic.

The high clergy officiating at the ceremony included the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, as consecrator; the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington and Chancellor of Catholic University, and the Most Rev. Egidio Vagnozzi, Apostolic Delegate to the Philippine Islands, coconsecrators.

Attending the consecration mass, which continued for almost two hours, were the Most Rev. Lawrence Shehan, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, Ambassador and Mrs. Alberto Tarchiani of Italy, Ambassador Joseph D. Charles of Haiti, Senora Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassabean area.

Present also was Archbishop Lardone's predecessor as Nuncio in Haiti and the Dominican Republic, Archbishop Alfredo Pancini, recently appointed Nuncio to Uruguay.

The ceremony ended as Archbishop Lardone, crowned with the mitre and bearing the crozier in his hand, blessed the people present and then read the Gospel according to St. John.

An informal reception and a luncheon for the clergy in the university gymnasium followed the consecration.

Judge Marshall To Hear Trailer Case in Fairfax

Judge Elliott Marshall, of Virginia's Seventeenth Judicial Circuit, has been designated to hear the case of American Trailer Co., Inc. vs. the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors at Fairfax County Circuit Court July 21.

The trailer company, which operates one of the largest trailer parks in the county, has challenged the constitutionality of the county trailer ordinance as imposing dual taxation. The county supervisors recently amended the ordinance to boost the tax levied on trailer lots.

Judge Marshall was designated by Justice Willis D. Miller of the Virginia Supreme Court to sit in place of Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown, who disqualified himself.

Arlington Democrats Reject Mrs. Dugan for Committee

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Apparently because of a tea party last year, Mrs. Jeanne Dugan, wife of Arlington County Board member Daniel A. Dugan, has been rejected as a candidate for the County Democratic Committee.

The committee yesterday announced Mrs. Dugan had failed to qualify as a candidate. Committee Chairman Harrison Mann declined to say why.

Mrs. Dugan gave this explanation:

Last October, she said, a tea party was given at the Dugan home for I. Lee Potter, an independent candidate running against Democrat Alfred E. Frisbie. Potter lost by a narrow margin.

Felt She Opposed

Committeemen, who rejected Mrs. Dugan's name during a closed session Wednesday night, apparently felt she was working against the Democratic candidate, she said. She called the action "ridiculous."

One Democratic committeeman, who asked not to be quoted, said the group "couldn't approve a person who had worked actively against the Democratic candidate."

On Wednesday night the Democratic Committee accepted J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm as candidates for the House of Delegates and Basil M. DeLashmutt as the Democratic county board candidate.

74 Candidates Certified

It also certified 74 candidates for the committee (two are elected from each of Arlington's 27 precincts), and received notice from another, Mrs. Miriam T. Murtha, that she is withdrawing from the race.

Mrs. Dugan said her rejection by the committee indicates that body "wishes to remain a part of the State machine." She said the Arlington branch of the machine "hand-picks all its candidates and will continue to do so until voters wake up to the fact and throw them out of office."

Earlier, the Democratic committee had failed to qualify Arthur F. Souther and James J. J. Kelley because of defects in their declaration of candidacy for the House of Delegates. Both are outspoken opponents of the dominant branch of the Democratic Party in Virginia.

Ex-Rep. Smith At 86 Applies For Marriage License

Addison Taylor Smith, 86-year-old Washington attorney and former Republican Representative from Idaho, applied for a marriage license yesterday in Philadelphia, the Associated Press reported.

Smith

Smith, who lives in the Netherlands Apartments, 1852 Columbia rd. nw., was accompanied by his bride-to-be, Mrs. Rose H. Stearns, 59, widow of Arthur Stearns, also of Washington. Press dispatches said she gave her occupation as secretary.

The former Representative served in Congress from 1913 to 1933

Marlene Smoking When She Should Be Toasting King

London, June 30 (AP).—Marlene Dietrich smoked at the wrong moment and came within inches of getting her knuckles rapped.

She smoked through a long cigarette holder at a luncheon given for her yesterday at the Savoy Hotel before the toast to the King. In Britain, that is the height of something you don't do, and Marlene forgot.

The toastmaster didn't like Marlene's improperly timed cigarette and he banged his gavel prematurely—in the middle of the dessert.

He brought it down with a sharp rap close to Marlene's fingers and in booming tones proposed the traditional toast to the King. Then with a rasp he said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you may now smoke."

The 75 guests sat in stunned silence for a second and then laughed. Marlene said "I'm terribly sorry."

'Gadabout' Parents Rebuked by Elder

"Gadabout mothers and too-busy fathers" drew a sharp rebuke yesterday from a Washington pastor, who said they are "flirting with sorrow and courting trouble."

Dart

Elder Archa O. Dart, educational and Sabbath school secretary of the Potomac Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, delivered a warning to neglectful parents before 3000 persons at the Takoma Park annual camp meeting.

"Why not live at home?" he asked. "Many people who seek happiness away from its source seek in vain."

His advice was: "Do not let Satan break up your home—live there."

"Flirting With Sorrow"

He urged parents to "pull up the ugly weeds of discontent, nagging, scolding and quarreling" in the home, which, he said, was given to them "to dress and to keep."

The "gadabout mother is flirting with sorrow, and the too-busy-to-stay-at-home father in courting trouble," Elder Dart said.

He called on parents to make the home the "most attractive place in the world to your children. Remember the mother's presence should be its greatest charm."

Habits formed in childhood and youth have more influence than any natural endowment in making men and women intellectually great or dwarfed or crippled, he added.

Good family religion is more conducive to spiritual growth than a revival, he said, adding: "Religion must be alive every day in the week to live at all, and must be in the home as well as in the church."

Report on Publishing Work

A report on the Seventh-Day Adventist publishing work, which began in 1849, was given by Elder J. F. Kent, publishing secretary of the Columbia Union Conference. It showed that total sales last year amounted to 185 million dollars in medical, religious and spiritual books and magazines.

Scheduled speakers at today's sessions include: Elder T. L. Oswald, General Conference home missionary secretary; Elder J. R. Ferren, Press Bureau of the General Conference; Elder E. L. Hanson, pastor of the Pennsylvania Avenue Adventist Church, Washington; Elder Denton E. Rebok, of the Theological Seminary, Takoma Park; and Miss Mary Walsh, Bible instructor of the Columbia Union Conference.

Delay Asked In Voiding of News Gag

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP). The State is asking for a delay in a Court of Appeals order wiping out sections of Rule 904 which restricts publication and broadcast of crime news.

The Maryland high court reversed contempt of court convictions of three Baltimore radio stations and a news commentator on June 9 in a decision that invalidated vital parts of the Baltimore supreme bench rule.

Attorney General Hall Hammond requested the delay in issuing the actual order reversing the convictions pending a petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for a review of the case.

Counsel for WCBM, one of the radio stations involved in the court test, promptly filed an objection to the "stay of mandate" petition, branding it as "in the nature of persecution."

And, said Attorney J. Purdon Wright, the request by Hammond "is entirely unjustified in view of the decision of the (Appeals) court" in the contempt cases which grew out of alleged violations of 904.

The order on question would become effective "on or about" July 9, Hammond's petition noted, and it is impossible to expect the Supreme Court to act on the review request by that time.

British Press Is Cool to Plan For Criticism

By Ned Russell

London, June 30 (NYHT).—Britain's newspapers will not accept proposals of the Royal Commission on the Press that newspapers set up a general council to watch over their operations and safeguard their interests, editorials indicated today.

The commission yesterday generally absolved the press of charges of corruption and monopolistic practices, but was mildly critical of many editorial practices.

The commission urged newspapers to join voluntarily in setting up a 25-member general council with a wide field of influence but no particular power. No newspaper supported it.

In the House of Commons today, the Labor Government agreed in principle to a debate on the 363-page report of the commission. House Leader Herbert Morrison and other members of the government and Labor Party obviously were disappointed by the general verdict of the commission.

Blonde Sued At 59 to Show Hurt of Love

London, June 30 (U.P.).—A 59-year-old blonde divorcee said today that she sued a 74-year-old Member of Parliament for breach of promise "to show the world that a woman of 60 could be hurt as much—in fact, far more—by love than a girl in her teens."

Mrs. May Orchard said "there was never such a lover" as onetime Liberal M. P. Thomas Atholl Robertson, who was cleared of her charges yesterday by a jury in the London law courts.

Robertson said their friendship was purely political.

"Nothing to do with sexual relations?" he was asked.

"None whatever," he replied. "I am nearly 75 years of age."

Mrs. Orchard said they used a code in talking to each other when friends were present.

"If he said to me, 'No Liberal meeting next week,' it meant he could not see me next week," she said.

Mrs. Orchard was ordered to pay court costs.

Fairfax Group Sends Tuck 2 Road Tax Resolutions

The Taxpayers Advisory Association of Fairfax County has adopted and sent to Governor Tuck two resolutions dealing with the financing of county road improvements.

One put the association on record as opposing a county automobile tax or any other property tax for road improvements. It stated that car owners now pay State taxes on gasoline and vehicles sufficient to provide necessary road improvements "if properly and equitably administered."

The other resolution asked the State Department of Highways to declare a two-year moratorium on repayment of $205,000 advanced to Fairfax in 1947-48 for repairing damage caused by the severe winter that year. Results of the 1950 census will mean a substantial increase in road funds to the county by 1951, the resolution stated.

Slain Girl's Escort Balks at Lie Test

Chicago, June 30 (U.P.).—Arthur Marino, 27, balked today at attempts to give him a lie test on his story that two men forced him to drink poison and then killed his sweetheart, Joan Coward, 17.

Despite the burns in his mouth and throat, Marino was able to "talk plainly about some things" but was incoherent about important questions, police said.

Assistant State's Attorney Alex Napoli said Marino's story of the slaying was "fantastic."

Ohio's House Votes to Send Girl to D. C.

Columbus, Ohio, June 30 (AP).—The Ohio House of Representatives today adopted a resolution which, in effect, asked the Ohio American Legion auxiliary to send Joan Rankin to the Girls' Nation Assembly in Washington, D. C.

The resolution disapproved the auxiliary's action in not sending the 16-year-old Cincinnati girl to Washington because of racial discrimination she might encounter there.

Miss Rankin was elected governor of Buckeye Girls' State last week. Usually, girl State governors attend the Girls' Nation in Washington. However, Mrs. Carl W. Zeller director of BGS, said yesterday such participation was entirely voluntary.

Mrs. Zeller said the auxiliary "positively will not" send the girl to Washington, because it wanted to save her the "embarrassment posed by certain social discriminations in Washington."

It also asked that President Truman and Congress be requested "to take such appropriate action as would prevent the Capital of our Nation from continuing to be a spectacle of criticism from the nations of the world because of such conditions as affect our democracy, our Christianity and our statements of brotherhood."

The Washington area American Veterans Committee announced Miss Rankin would be a welcome guest at the nonsegregated AVC Club.

Girls' Nation, like Buckeye Girls' State, is sponsored by the auxiliary. The national assembly is to be held August 21-27.

3 Floggings Uncovered In Alabama

Ashland, Ala., June 30 (AP).—Three floggings were uncovered in this rural county today by two Methodist ministers making a private investigation of mob violence.

The Rev. H. Frank Ledford, of Ashland, and the Rev. Luther Brown of Millerville, said they are investigating rumors of additional acts.

The Rev. Ledford is grand chaplain of the grand lodge of Masons of Alabama.

[The United Press quoted the ministers as saying between 25 and 30 persons have been flogged in a "whipping ground" in an old mine.

[The Rev. Mr. Brown said that evidence found at the arena of mob justice indicated some of the victims met an even worse fate.]

They said they verified these floggings:

1. J. J. Gavens, 60, white herb doctor, lured from his home the night of May 30 and beaten with a blackjack. His wife exchanged shots with the unmasked assailants. He and his wife and small child later sold their home and left Millerville.

2. Willie Horton, 33, Negro infantry veteran, and his brother, Herschel, beaten and lashed until they bled by white-robed and hooded men the night of June 1. Willie was quoted as being told "we had been talking too much."

The ministers said they were informed three masked men entered an Ashland Negro cafe, asked about a Negro and fired two shots into the ceiling. No one was harmed.

Ashland is in Clay county, 85 miles southeast of Birmingham, where several floggings and cross burnings have been reported. The Jefferson County (Birmingham) grand jury meets in special session there Saturday to investigate.

Probe of Georgia Klan, Lynchings Started

New York, June 30 (AP).—The Bill of Rights Conference announced today it has started an undercover investigation of a lynching and Ku Klux Klan activities in Georgia.

Clark Foreman, executive director of the conference and former president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, said the director of the inquiry "is a distinguished resident of the State of Georgia known for his scholarship and courage.

Slaying Case

Six Granted Jersey Plea For Retrial

Trenton, N. J., June 30 (AP).—The "Trenton Six"—six Negroes sentenced to die for slaying an aged-storekeeper—today won their fight for a new trial.

The State Supreme Court unanimously reversed a Mercer County Court murder convetion. It halted a scheduled mass execution of the six prisoners, holding that the trial judge had erred last August.

The Civil Rights Congress, listed as subversive by the Government, spearheaded the appeal.

The six were convicted of bludgeoning William Horner, 72, to death January 27, 1948, during a $35 robbery.

The Supreme Court ruled that Trial Judge Charles P. Hutchinson had erred in pronouncing the death sentence because the jury verdict was "guilty" rather than "guilty in the first degree."

The six defendants are Collis English, 23; McKinley Forrest, 35; John McKenzie, 24; Horace Wilson, 37; Ralph Cooper, 23, and James Thorpe, 24.

2 Indicted Under Klan Statute in Tennessee

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 30 (AP). Two men have been indicted under an 80-year-old anti-Ku Klux Klan statute and charged with terrorizing nearby Dolly Pond citizens while wearing robes and hoods.

Homer Blair, 39, a former deputy sheriff, and William Hardin, 33, were indicted yesterday by the Hamilton County grand jury, two months after hooded men blackjacked several men and frightened others with pistol fire.

Fourth Deaths Expected to Hit 600 or More

Chicago, June 30. (U.P.)—Experts today estimated accidents during the Fourth of July weekend will kill 600 or more persons.

The National Safety Council and the American Automobile Association estimated that 290 persons will die in traffic accidents, 200 drown, 100 to 150 die in plane crashes and miscellaneous accidents, and 5 to 10 die from fireworks accidents.

An estimated 10,000 persons will be injured.

Council President Ned H. Dearborn predicted one of the biggest traffic jams in history during the three-day holiday. He said there will be 33 million cars on the Nation's roads. The vehicles will burn 340 million gallons of gasoline in traveling 4,500,000,000 miles.

Dearborn said, "The Nation can cut the holiday traffic toll to half the estimate, or even less, if it takes seriously ths warning:

"Every motorist should drive over the Fourth as if his life depended on it—because it does."

Woman Fined in Yard Fight Over Muddying of 3 Sheets

A hair-pulling, rough-and-tumble fight between two Arlington women—which began over three dirty sheets—was verbally restaged yesterday in Arlington County Court.

The attractive, 33-year-old complainant, Mrs. Helen B. Rogers, said it all began in the back yard of her Shirley Homes house Saturday when a neighbor's boy, Charlie Logston, "smeared his muddy hands all over three of my clean sheets."

Mrs. Rogers said she "shook" Charlie and sent him home. Almost at once, she testified, the boy's mother, Mrs. Helen Logston of 2641 S. Rolfe st. appeared and "asked me to step outside."

Four neighbors testified yesterday that the fight wound up with Mrs. Logston astride her fallen neighbor, beating her head against the ground.

Mrs. Rogers, a secretary for the American Red Cross, was taken—"unconscious," she said—to Arlington Hospital, treated and released.

She listed her injuries as two black eyes, a puffed lip, scratches on the face, a bite wound on the chest, and bruises on her body. She promptly swore out a warrant against Mrs. Logston for assault.

In court yesterday, the defendant denied thumping Mrs. Rogers' head on the ground. She said Mrs. Rogers had slapped her son.

Judge Reid found Mrs. Logston guilty, fined her $25 and suspended it.

U. S. Sues to Split Up du Pont Empire

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The long-heralded Government action to break up the duPont industrial empire was taken by Attorney General Clark yesterday.

The Government filed an anti-trust suit in Chicago, asking that:

1. The E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Inc., of Wilmington, Del., be divorced from the General Motors Corp.

2. The United States Rubber Co. of New York also be divorced from the duPont corporation.

Secret Rebates Charged

The suit charged that the three companies had operated to their mutual advantage, through, first, a system of secret rebates, and second, by dividing fields of manufacturing operations so as to eliminate competition.

The suit asked that all members of the duPont family be ordered to sell all stock in either General Motors or United States Rubber.

Named as defendants were: E. I. duPont de Nemours, General Motors, United States Rubber, Christiana Securities Co., Delaware Realty and Investment Corp., Pierre S. duPont, Lammot duPont, Irenee duPont, and all members of the duPont family related by blood or marriage to Pierre, Lammot or Irenee duPont, who hold voting stock in either United States Rubber, Christiana Securities or Delaware Realty and Investment.

The last two were described in the suit as "personal holding companies" of the duPont family. The duPont family, the suit charges, gained control of United States Rubber and General Motors through these companies.

"Concentration of Power"

Clark declared that the suit was directed toward "breaking up the largest single concentration of industrial power in the United States."

Clark declared: "The growth of duPont, United States Rubber and General Motors to positions of market dominance in their respective fields has been marked by the elimination of many independent businesses and a decline in the strength and vigor of those that survived.

"The relief sought in this case," he added, "will open the way for small and medium-sized manufacturers to compete for business in markets which have long been closed to them."

The Associated Press reported from Chicago that the suit alleged nine illegal acts:

1. DuPont required that each of the three manufacturing companies purchase nearly all their requirements from the other two companies, thus depriving outside suppliers of a chance to compete.

2. DuPont enlarged its manufacturing facilities and bought into competing concerns so as to be able to produce all the chemical products needed by General Motors and U. S. Rubber.

3. DuPont forced General Motors and U. S. Rubber to expand their lines of manufacturing from automobiles and tires to include entirely different products. Included were household appliances for the purpose of enlarging the market available for duPont products.

GM Subsidized, Is Charge

4. DuPont subsidized its own expansion by using the profits realized from sale of materials to General Motors and U. S. Rubber in a closed market.

5. Dupont subsidized the growth of General Motors by granting it secret rebates and lower prices than those given to outside customers. At the same time duPont required U. S. Rubber to grant lower prices for tires to General Motors while selling the same products to other firms at higher prices.

6. DuPont subsidized the growth of U. S. Rubber by the use of profits obtained from the tire company in its sales to General Motors and to duPont.

7. All three firms induced outside suppliers to purchase the suppliers' own material needs from the defendant firms and so closed a market.

8. All three firms made available to each other technical data and trade information on an exclusive or preferential basis.

9. The three firms eliminated competition among themselves by allotting each a certain field of manufacturing.

Charges Flatly Denied

At Wilmington Crawford H. Greenwalt, president of duPont, issued a flat denial of the charges. The relationships between the three companies, he said, have never "been either illegal or in any way detrimental to the interests of the people of the United States.

"On the contrary," Greenwalt added, "these relationships have served the public in a conspicuous way. In that firm belief we will defend our actions and our present position with the utmost vigor.

"Since these relationships have been a matter of public record and public information for many years, the motive for this suit must arise out of determination by the Department of Justice to attack bigness in business as such.

"We cannot believe that such a position is, or will be, supported by the American public, because, in the end, it would increase prices, reduce living standards, and even weaken the national security.

Business Called Competitive

Herbert E. Smith, chairman of United States Rubber, declared in New York that his company was a leader in "one of the most competitive industries in America."

"We are in business to serve the public by providing the best possible products at the lowest possible prices.

"All our relationships with other companies are designed to help us achieve this objective. All our relationships are legal and fair to the public."

The earnings of duPont shares, according to Wall Street reports, are not as dependent today upon the earnings of General Motors as they have been in the past.

Senate Votes Labor Bill

nounced it will take the issue directly to the voters in 1950, just about conceding the Taft-Hartley Act has another year to run.

In the Senate it was a victory all the way for Senator Taft (R., Ohio), who himself must stand for reelection in 1950.

In two installments Taft wrote a complete substitute for all but nine lines of the Administration bill.

On Tuesday he sealed into the measure Taft-Hartley authority for 60-day injunctions against critical strikes, coupled with power to seize struck plants in an emergency.

Yesterday he completed his sweep. His second substitute, retaining 22 of the most important features of the Taft-Hartley law, some in modified form, was approved by the Senate, 49 to 44.

After that, Senate Labor Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), whose repeal bill was rewritten by Taft, rose to his feet. He offered an amendment to change the title to the "Labor-Management Relations Act of 1949."

Thomas, who had fought hard to beat down every Taft change, was simply making the title conform to that given by Congress to the original Taft-Hartley Act of 1948.

"It should be called 'The Taft Act'," he said.

On the final count, Administration leaders, who had flatly predicted a veto if Taft won all the way, cast their votes against passage.

Voting with Taft at the end were 34 Republicans and 17 Democrats, mostly Southerners. Voting to kill the Taft version of the bill were 35 Democrats and only 7 Republicans. It wasn't enough.

Senators simply were making a record for the election battle to come. All the fight went out of the Senate after the earlier 49-to-44 vote, clinching Taft's 1949 model of the old law.

For all practical purposes the Senate battle ended Wednesday, when AFL and CIO leaders served notice the already adopted Taft authority for injunctions or plant seizures in critical strikes made the bill unacceptable to them.

Administration leaders made no further effort to amend Taft's second package substitute. A test amendment by Republicans showed they would have had little chance.

This was offered by Senators Baldwin (R., Conn.), Saltonstall (R., Mass.) and Flanders (R., Vt.). Their amendment would have given the Federal law precedence over State anti-closed shop and union shop laws.

Taft said Congress had no right to nullify the labor laws of some 17 States and the Senate stuck with him, 54 to 41.

Taft accepted, however, an amendment by Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), one of the most bitter critics of his bill, preserving the independent status of the Federal Mediation Service. Taft said it was similar to his own provision.

Although the Senate action was hailed as a Taft victory, his substitute bill had two cosponsors. They were Senators Donnell (R., Mo.) and H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.).

The new bill continues the closed shop ban of the Taft-Hartley Act, but permits employers to notify a union of job vacancies and give it a reasonable chance to provide workers.

Other features, some of them modifying the old law:

Prohibitions against mass picketing, jurisdictional strikes and most secondary boycotts would continue, as would the ban on strikes by Government employes.

Non-Communist oaths would be required of union officials and employers alike.

Power of States to regulate compulsory unionism in their boundaries would be preserved.

With slight modification, the guarantee of free speech to employers would continue.

Unions (but not employers) must file financial statements as under present law.

Regulation of union welfare funds would continue, but under the direct supervision of the Secretary of Labor.

Unions as well as employers must bargain collectively in good faith. Both remain responsible on their contracts, and are as liable to suits as if they were corporations in the Federal courts.

The NLRB's right to seek temporary injunctions against unfair labor practices by both unions and employers would be continued, but so-called mandatory injunctions are eliminated.

Foremen would continue to be excluded from coverage.

NLRB membership would be increased from five to seven, and there no longer would be an independent general counsel. Thus, the board would regain its old authority to prosecute as well as judge unfair labor practices.

The ban on union contributions to political candidates would continue, but the ban on political "expenditures" would be lifted.

The prohibition on "featherbedding" would be eliminated.

Employes on strike again would be permitted to vote in plant elections, even if they are not entitled to reinstatement.

for the Soldiers, Sailors & Marines Club for 1950 because it believes the club can be self-sustaining if it raises its rates a little and puts its canteen on a better basis.

The Washington Animal Rescue League was voted in again, although UCS doubted its eligibility under current by-laws. The League, a charter member of the old Washington Community Chest, will have its eligibility studied during the coming year.

Voting went smoothly, except when Trustee Ernest F. Henry tried to "table" a motion to admit the Potomac Youth Hostels because of "rumors" he had heard about operation of the unit. The tabling motion was withdrawn when several trustees protested vigorously and the hotel group was admitted by a 45-10 vote.

In all, UCS accepted 46 agencies without qualification, voted support for one agency only through 1950, recommended three others with "qualifying conditions" and gave four others a March 1 deadline to meet specified conditions.

Without Qualification

Agencies admitted without qualification for 1950 Chest campaign support were:

Barney Neighborhood House; Boys Club of Washington; Bureau of Rehabilitation; Camp Fire Girls, Potomac Area; Catholic Charities; Children's Country Home; Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children.

Christ Child Settlement House; Department of Social Welfare—Washington Federation of Churches; D. C. Society for Prevention of Blindness; Family Service Association; Florence Crittenton Home.

Friendship House; Georgetown House; Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia; Hebrew Home for the Aged; Instructive Visiting Nurse Society; Jewish Community Center; Jewish Social Service Agency.

J. K. Nye Council House; Legal Aid Bureau; Northwest Settlement House; Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association; Potomac Area American Youth Hostels; St. Anna's Home; St. Ann's Infant Asylum; St. Joseph's Home and School; St. Vincent's Home and School; Salvation Army.

Shoe and Rubber Fund-Federation of Parent and Teachers Association; Shoe and Rubber Fund-D. C. Congress of Parent and Teachers Association; Social Hygiene Society; Southeast House; Southwest House; Stoddard Baptist Home; Summer Outings Committee.

Travelers Aid Society, 12th Street Young Men's Christian Association, United Community Services of Washington, Washington Hearing Society, Washington Housing Association, Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, Washington Urban League, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Welfare Department-American Legion.

Hugh K. Duffield, department store executive, first vice president; Mrs. T. O. Wedel, Public Welfare Board member, second vice president; Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, District school official, third vice president; Charles C. Glover 3d, attorney, secretary, and A. H. Lawson, bank executive, treasurer.

Hawaii Strike Chief Predicts Rejection of 14-Cent Offer

Honolulu, June 30 (AP).—President Truman today expressed hope Hawaii's striking stevedores would accept a 14-cent-an-hour wage raise, but their leader predicted they would reject it by a 10-to-1 margin.

The 2000 strikers are balloting today and Friday on the proposal, made by a fact-finding board appointed by the territorial governor.

Waterfront employers late last night announced reluctant approval, but declared, "In the absence of prompt acceptance by the union, all reasons for our acceptance will be destroyed."

Two union committees recommended to their membership that the settlement be rejected.

Pay is the only issue in the 61-day-old strike which has paralyzed Hawaiian commerce and cost an estimated 13 million dollars in business.

Gov. Ingram M. Stainback, who appointed the fact-finding board, said after confering with President Truman in Washington this morning:

"The President expressed hope both parties will promptly accept recommendations of the fact-finding board."

The President himself reiterated this later in the day at his news conference in Washington and added that the strike had not altered his position in favor of Hawaiian statehood. He said he had no power to intervene in the strike.

However, Secretary of the Interior Krug sent a telegram to Honolulu urging immediate settlement.

"Speaking for the Administration and the Department of the Interior," said Krug's message to Acting Gov. Oren E. Long, "I most earnestly urge that the entire Hawaiian community support the board's findings and, through the weight of public opinion, prevail upon both sides to bring an end immediately to the strike."

fore a strike after expiration of an agreement.

Lewis accomplishes these things by his move today:

1. He avoids a strike, which could be unpopular with soft coal miners and would force a showdown with the Government and lawmakers struggling with labor legislation.

2. He cuts down the enormous stockpile of coal, postponing the crisis until cold weather is near.

3. He can wait and see what Philip Murray, head of the CIO and the United Steelworkers, gets out of U. S. Steel Corp. and other steel makers in negotiations now under way. Murray also may delay his own showdown, however. Lewis and Murray, once colleagues, now are bitter rivals.

World Bank Team To Study Colombia

Eugene R. Black, who takes over today as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), announced yesterday that the institution was about to make a contribution to Point 4—The Truman Administration's "bold new program" for helping underdeveloped countries raise their standard of living.

Black disclosed that a nine-man team of experts will leave July 10 for Colombia. Its task will be to undertake "a comprehensive survey of Colombia's over-all economy with the view of recommending ways to increase the wealth of that country."

He said that the mission to Colombia, the most thoroughly staffed ever sent out by the bank, would be the forerunner of many such missions—all of them seeking to realize the aims of Point 4.

Dr. Lauchlin Currie, economist and formerly administrative assistant to the late President Roosewill head the Colombian mission.

As an indication of the importance attached to this type of mission, Robert L. Garner, vice president of the World Bank, will go along and remain in Colombia about a week. The mission itself will remain in the South American country for three months.

"It probably will require several more months," said an announcement, "to draft the report and recommendations involving Colombia's agriculture, industry, electric power, transportation, and public health.

"The mission will attempt to assess the economic potentialities of Colombia, appraise the feasibility of various projects which may be recommended to improve the country's economy, and indicate the respective roles that foreign and domestic capital should play in carrying out the program.

Three other international organizations are cooperating with the mission—the World Health Organization, the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations and the International Monetary Fund.

Dr. Richard A. Musgrave, associate professor of economics at the University of Michigan, will be chief economist of the Colombian mission.

Others, in addition to Dr. Currie, who make up the nine-man team, are Jacques Torfs, an economist of the bank; Carl W. Flesher, formerly director of construction of the United States Maritime Commission, who will be adviser on industry and electric power; Joseph L. White, formerly executive officer of the Office of Defense Transportation, United States Government, who will be adviser on transportation; Haywood R. Faison, chief of the division of economics, Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, United States Government, who will be adviser on rivers and harbors.

Also, Raymond C. Smith, assistant chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Government, nominated by the Food and Agricultural Organization of the U. N., adviser on agriculture; Roger V. Anderson, member of the staff of the International Monetary Fund, adviser on finance and foreign exchange, and Joseph W. Mountin, M.D., assistant surgeon general, United States Public Health Service, nominated for the mission by the Pan American Sanitary Bureau.

Japanese Reds Briefly Hold Police Station

Tokyo, (Friday) July 1 (AP).—Japanese Communists seized a police station 110 miles north of Tokyo yesterday but abandoned it when rural police squads approached.

Press reports said 400 Communists stormed the police station at Taira, on the east coast. This was the first outright Communist outbreak under the occupation, although the Reds have been back of labor and other violent demonstrations.

Police at Taira had ordered the Communists to remove a bulletin board from in front of the railway station.

A fight broke out when a number of Communists entered the police station. Six policemen and a Communist were injured. The other Reds were arrested.

Then about 400 Communist reinforcements broke into the station and released their comrades. The Newspaper Asahi said Red flags were hoisted over the station.

Word spread that rural police reinforcements were on the way from Fukushima, about 60 miles to the north. The Communists then retreated from the station about midnight.

Misinformed, Says Truman of Baruch

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday said Bernard M. Baruch was misinformed when he accused the Administration of blocking action on an industrial mobilization plan.

Mr. Truman, talking to reporters at a White House news conference, seemed determined not to engage in a showdown controversy with the 77-year-old elder statesman.

He turned aside a barrage of questions at the outset with a reply of no comment. Finally, he said there was no use in prolonging such a line of questioning. Baruch was misinformed, he said, and that was all there was to it.

Baruch, reached by radio telephone by the New York Herald Tribune as he set out for Europe on the Queen Elizabeth, said:

"I have not been misinformed and I hope that the President is better informed on other matters than he has been on this one.

"He is a man of intelligence and experience, but he has been badly informed himself. Maybe that accounts for some of the errors in his Administration. I hope that he is better informed on other matters of importance to the country."

Mr. Truman, after his relatively mild comment on Baruch's charges, declined, too, to touch off any fireworks in the case of his former Secretary of State, James F. Byrnes, and his long-time political adversary, Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

"Mr. President," a reporter asked, "were you surprised at Mr. Byrnes' atttack made at Washington and Lee University recently?"

(Byrnes said that if some of the Administration's plans were adopted the result would be a "welfare state," with everyone an "economic slave.")

Mr. Truman's reply to the question was a no comment.

He then was asked whether there was any connection between Byrnes' attack and Baruch's attack. Both are from South Carolina, and they are good friends.

Mr. Truman smiled and told the reporter to draw his own conclusions.

Earlier, there had been a discussion of the Senate's action on the labor bill, which represented an all-out triumph for Senator Taft.

"Do you think this action . . . will help or hurt you in trying to defeat Taft?" the President was asked.

Mr. Truman said he never had undertaken to defeat Taft in Ohio, and that therefore the question was based on a wrong premise.

He was asked if the efforts to defeat Taft when he comes up for reelection in 1950 had his "blessing." He replied that he didn't want to answer qutstions like that.

"Well," said a reporter, "how about the Democrats who are helping Taft? How do you feel about them?"

Mr. Truman said he had no comment to make.

He was reminded that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had said that Democrats who lined up behind Taft on the labor bill were "enemies of labor." Did he have any comment?

The Chief Executive said he didn't want to speak for Green, that he had spoken very plainly for himself. In short, he had no comment.

His seeming determination to steer clear of controversy appeared to weaken somewhat on the next question.

A reporter quoted Senator George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Finance Committee, as saying he thought an increase in taxes at this time would be unwise.

Mr. Truman, who has asked for four billion in new taxes, replied that he didn't think Senator George ever has favored sufficient taxes to run the Government. Therefore, he added, his statement was not unusual.

The President declined to discuss Treasury reports on the probable size of the budegt deficit this year. Would the deficit, he was asked, be large enough to justify a tax increase?

He suggested reporters read his messages to the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress vetoing tax reduction bills.

These messages, ignored by the Eightieth Congress, called for higher taxes in prosperous times to avert deficit financing and to reduce the huge national debt.

He would not comment on the Senate Finance Committee's action yesterday favoring a cut in excise taxes to the 1942 level, but did say he had not known such action was going to be taken.

In advance of yesterday's White House news conference, some reporters thought there was a possibility Mr. Truman would make a vigorous reply to Baruch's charges on the mobilization question.

They had in mind, in addition to Baruch's latest charges, the report last autumn that Mr. Truman was furious with the financier because of his failure to help in the 1948 campaign.

Once the news conference got under way, however, it was clear the President had made up his mind to adopt a nonbelligerent attitude.

His final word on the matter was that White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross had effectively answered Baruch the day before when he said Baruch had been "badly misinformed."

Deputy Resigns

Lapham Quits As ECA Boss In China

Roger D. Lapman, former Mayor of San Francisco, yesterday resigned as chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration in China.

ECA said also that Robert Allen Griffin, of Monterey, Calif., has resigned as deputy chief of the China aid program.

The agency gave no reason for the resignations, but indicated they stemmed from the cutback in the China program as a result of Communist advances. Congress has forbidden use of ECA supplies in Communist-held areas of China.

Paul G. Hoffman, ECA Administrator, praised both men for "their resourcefulness and devotion to duty" in supervising American aid to China during the past year.

Hoffman said in a statement:

"ECA is continuing on a reduced scale in the areas of China not dominated by the Communists."

The acting chief of the China mission will be Norman Meiklejohn, a special assistant in ECA's China organization.

7000 Dockers Idle as British Strike Spreads

London, June 30 (U.P.).—Britain's dock dispute took a turn for the worse today as the number of idle stevedores grew to 7000 and unloading operations were stalled on 70 ships in London harbor.

More than 5000 longshoremen reported for work, offering to handle any but Canadian vessels out of sympathy for striking Canadian seamen. Employers at five of London's largest docks refused to give any jobs until the dockers agree to work all the ships.

Then the strike began to spread. Labor Minister George Isaacs gave a secret report to the cabinet on the dock strike today. Isaacs has accused Communists of being responsible for unrest among the stevedores.

Later, in the House of Commons, he asked Britain's railway workers to call off their "slow-down" scheduled to begin throughout the country Sunday if demands for a $2 weekly pay raise are not met.

Czech U. N. Employe Comes Out of Hiding

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 30 (U.P.).—Adolf Mudroch, Czech employe of the United Nations information center here, resumed his normal routine today after hiding in the U.N. office for almost five weeks to escape Czech police.

Mudroch said he did not expect police to make another attempt to arrest him and the whole affair was a mistake.

11.2 Billion Tag Put on Trunk Road

By The Associated Press

The Public Roads Administration put an $11,266,400,000 price tag on the proposed 37,800-mile national trunk highway system yesterday.

In a report to Congress on "highway needs of the national defense," it called for a seven-fold increase in the current construction rate and said the trunkline must be completed within 20 years.

It also recommended the stockpiling of enough highway and bridge materials for a "continuous" six-month reserve against the possibility of war or a major peacetime disaster.

Heat Kills 17 in Europe

London, June 30 (U.P.).—Wide areas of western Europe were in the grip of a heat wave today which has caused at least 17 deaths and which threatens crops and water supplies.

Bank Head Thinks Britain Will Devalue

By Robert S. Allen

Winthrop Aldrich, head of the giant Chase National Bank of New York, voiced the belief to a group of Republican leaders that the British pound will be devaluated after Congress passes the multibillion-dollar ECA appropriation bill.

Aldrich made his prediction at a private meeting in Washington.

The guests included Republican leaders both in and out of Congress. The discussion was chiefly on foreign affairs, particularly British policies.

Sharp criticism was voiiced on British trade relations. These were characterized as aimed at expanding the scope of the sterling block at the expense of the United States. The restrictive British-Argentine trade agreement was cited as an example of this.

General sentiment of the meeting was strongly condemnatory of British policies.

One Republican leader expressed the view an organized campaign is under way in Britain to create the impression the U. S. is demanding devaluation of the pound.

He said he based this belief on a number of recent articles he had read in prominent British newspapers. Although appearing in papers of divergent political views and written by different men, all the articles had the same tenor. Each gave the distinct impression, he asserted, that the U. S. is exerting strong pressure for devaluation.

Treasury Secretary Snyder, Secretary of State Acheson and ECA Director Hoffman have flatly denied this charge. The repeatedly stated official position of the U. S. is vigorously against devaluation of the pound.

Snyder is leaving for Britain soon to confer with Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer. He is reported opposed to devaluation.

Mistreated, Vatican Envoy Tells Prague

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 30 (U.P.).—Mgr. Gennaro Verolino, Vatican representative in Czechoslovakia, protested to the Foreign Office today that Communist police mistreated him during a five-day tour he made in Slovakia.

He also informed the Foreign Office that he would leave soon.

During the last week Czech Communist officials and newspapers have criticized him sharply for his attitude in the dispute between church and state.

Verolino said he was sent to Kosice police station, where his chauffeur and a priest who accompanied him were questioned. He said also that he could not get gasoline and that he had to spend two nights in his car because he could not get a hotel room.

French Ambassador Maurice DeJean, dean of the Diplomatic Corps, also has protested to the Foreign Office against the treatment given the Vatican envoy.

Official sources declined comment on church reports that anti-Communist rioting in Slovakia reached such proportions over the weekend that martial law was clamped on the province for 60 hours.

Bands Reported Formed To Fight for Catholics

Vienna, Austria, June 30 (AP).—A diplomatic source said today partisan bands are being formed in Czechoslovakia to fight for the Catholic Church against the Communist government.

A detailed report dated last Monday was received from the Province of Slovakia, the diplomatic informant said.

The report said the Czechoslovak government declared a state of siege in northwestern Slovakia last Sunday after priests read Archbishop Josef Beran's pastoral letter.

Two Communists were reported killed by angry Catholics in Cadca and Drahovce, it said.

West Berlin Rail Service Is Resumed

(From Press Dispatches)

Berlin (Friday), July 1.—West Berlin's railways began operating early today after six weeks of strike-enforced idleness.

First elevated trains began moving in the western sectors of the city at 4 a. m. The first Allied train left the American sector of Berlin for the west at 7:23 p. m. yesterday.

[The Associated Press said the Russians suddenly let western trucks roll unmolested between Berlin and the western zones after stopping them earlier today.

[It turned out that one Soviet sentry post wasn't satisfied with the way another Russian checkpoint indorsed travel permits and refused to let many trucks through for two days.

[Allied sources said the matter was ironed out by intervention of high Russian officials. German highway police reported in late afternoon that all trucks leaving and entering Berlin got by the checkpoints without trouble.]

McCloy Sees Long Struggle For Germany

New York, June 30 (AP).—John J. McCloy, who will become United States high commissioner for Germany, said today that the Germans' problems were long-range and that "even if progress is made in 10 years, it is good."

McCloy left by Air Force plane for Frankfurt from LaGuardia Field. He told newsmen: "The American people should understand there can be no solution in Germany in three months, six months or a year.

"These are long-range problems, and they (the Germans) are building a new economic and a new social life. It is my opinion that things are never as bad as they seem, nor as good as they seem.

"This is considered a difficult situation, but I am sure there is a solution."

LONG RANGE PLAN—Joint Army-Navy-Air Force Long Range Proving Ground, as planned by the National Military Establishment, will extend from Cape Canaveral, Fla., over the Bahamas and out to impact areas in the clear Atlantic Ocean. Guided missiles will be launched from the Cape, where a 5-mile safety area will be cleared. Nearby Banana River Air Force Base will be used as administrative headquarters, according to plans. Work is expected to begin this month, but the "shooting" won't start until July 1, 1951

Marshall Fired Because Plan Didn't Work, Vishinsky Says

Moscow, June 30 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky declared today that General George C. Marshall had been replaced as Secretary of State because his European recovery plan failed.

Vishinsky in an interview with Pravda and Izvestia asserted that the Big Four Foreign Ministers conference was a big Soviet victory.

He said that the Western powers were compelled to accept the spirit of the proposals of Russia at the conference and to alter their so-called "firm" policy.

Departure on Policy

Vishinsky took up point by point the statement that Secretary of State Dean Acheson made on the results of the Paris conference. Commenting on Acheson's statement that the success of the Marshall Plan led to the agreements on Germany in Paris, Vishinsky said:

"Actually, if the Marshall Plan was successful then how explain the fact that the author of this plan was relieved of the post of Secretary of State of the United States and replaced by another man?

"I believe that precisely the failure of the Marshall Plan was one of the reasons for the departure of the three Western Foreign Ministers (in Paris) from their original so-called firm policy."

Mutual concessions preceded the meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers, he said.

"And I think certain further mutual concessions will be necessary consistent with the principles of the Potsdam agreement," he added.

Achievement Claimed

"The most important achievement in Paris was the undoubted failure of the policy aimed at splitting up Germany, aimed at increasing international tension, and the undoubted success of the policy directed at the restoration of Germany's improvement and unity and the improvement of international relations and international collaboration," he said.

Vishinsky disclosed that the Russian-Yugoslav dispute began two years ago, before the Cominform attack on Marshal Tito.

"Two years ago . . . representatives of Yugoslavia conducted secret negotiations behind the back of the Soviet Union with the representatives of Britain, Mr. Noel-Baker (Philip Noel-Baker, secretary for commonwealth relations) and Mr. Hector McNeil (secretary of state in the Foreign Office), but did not obtain any concessions (on Austrian territory) from them," Vishinsky said.

World Wheat Pact in Effect

The 42-nation International Wheat Agreement went into force yesterday.

It became effective when India and Lebanon deposited their ratifications of the four-year accord designed to stabilize the world wheat market.

Their actions raised the number of bushels subscribed to by importing countries to 325,181,032. This put the total over the minimum requirement of 320 million bushels of wheat.

Under terms of the agreement, the importing nations had to subscribe to 70 per cent of the total agreed on by July 1 and the exporting nations had to agree to furnish 80 per cent of the total by the same date.

Australia became the third exporter to deposit its ratification earlier yesterday. Previously, the United States and Canada had done so.

of the girl charged with stealing Government secrets to pass along to Russia.

Palmer came in holding Miss Coplon's arm.

She took off the black raincoat she was wearing, sat back in her armchair.

She patted her attorney's face and he put his arm around her, stroking her brunette curls, then his hand held her shoulder. At times it moved down to rub her back.

There was almost none of the usual chatter in the courtroom, as entrance of judge and jury were awaited.

Before that Prosecutors John M. Kelley, jr., and Raymond P. Whearty—the latter Miss Coplon's former boss in the Justice Department—came and took their places.

Finally at 2:30 p. m., 75-year-old Judge Albert L. Reeves of Kansas City entered.

The marshal addressed the courtrom:

"Now, people, when the verdict is brought in, regardless of what it is, there'll be no demonstrations of any kind, no outbreaks . . . just be seated and be quiet."

Miss Coplon moved to the defense table, sat in her characteristic position of elbow on table, chin in hand.

The rotund defense attorney stroked her hair incessantly.

At 2:34 the jury entered.

The marshal spoke: "The defendant will rise."

Foreman's Voice Is Tense

The clerk stood up at his place before the judge:

"Mr. Foreman, has the jury agreed upon its verdict?"

Foreman Andrew H. Norford, 1111 Holbrook ter. ne., a telephone company repairman, got slowly to his feet:

"Yes, we have," he said, his voice quiet and slightly tense.

From the clerk, Paul Roser, there came then those standard but eternally dramatic words:

"What say you as to the defendant Judith Coplon on the first count of the indictment?"

This was the espionage count, charging Miss Coplon with taking confidential Government documents with intent and reason to believe that the information was to be used to the injury of the United States and the advantage of a foreign nation.

The foreman answered: "Guilty."

The answer made Miss Coplon subject to a sentence of 10 years imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

"On the second count of the indictment," said the clerk.

This count pertains to removal of the FBI documents from their files.

"Guilty," said the foreman.

This answer made Miss Coplon subject, in addition, to a sentence of three years imprisonment and $2000 fine.

The clerk addressed the whole jury:

"You find the defendant Judith Coplon guilty as indicted. That is your verdict, so say you, each and all?"

From all 12, in a soft-voiced chorus falling on a hushed courtroom, the word came again: "Guilty."

Miss Coplon resumed her seat. Palmer asked that the jurors be polled individually.

Answer by Name

"Members of the jury, as your names are called please state your individual verdict," the clerk said.

And he began:

"Andrew Norford, what is your verdict as to count one of the indictment?"

"Guilty," the foreman said back.

"Count two?"

"Guilty," he repeated.

And so the clerk went down the line, asking two questions of each juror, getting the same two answers each time: "Guilty." Most spoke it quietly and from some of the jury of eight men and four women, six Negroes and six whites, it was no more than just audible. But the faces of all were drawn with dead seriousness.

Then, before the import of their verdict had had time, little more than to scratch the consciousness, Judge Reeves was dismissing them from the duty they had fulfilled through 10 long weeks.

"Good Soldiers," Judge Says

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," Judge Reeves said, "I have developed a greater confidence in this country, in the Republic, because of the men and women who make up our juries. I feel the country safe as long as we have men and women like yourselves. I characterize you as good soldiers."

When the court had adjourned until today, following a storming argument between defense and prosecution attorneys as to whether sentence on Miss Coplon should be passed presently or after the New York trial, there was a surge and sweep forward toward the convicted girl.

Spectators pushed savagely around her to get as close a look as possible.

Reporters repeatedly pressed her for a statement as she pulled her black raincoat over her green, black-checked dress and started packing up the small valise she brings to court. One thing she put in was the Gideon Bible Palmer frequently brought to court from his hotel as a source for quotations.

A torrent of language was bursting from the intensive little defense attorney.

". . . jury with Government workers on it, illegally panelled . . . passion and prejudice . . . I'll appeal everything from soup to nuts . . ."

"She Can't Dance"

He broke it off to attend to the requests for comments from Miss Coplon:

"She has nothing to say," he said genially. "She can't sing and she can't dance."

"Judy, how about an autograph?" a man of about 30 popped a pencil and pad in her face. She refused but had to refuse about eight times before he finally left off.

"She's going to be famous," the man kept saying in disappointment.

"So was Joan of Arc," Palmer said.

There followed a pretty long session on the courthouse veranda to oblige the photographers, then Miss Coplon walked around over the lawn to do some of it over again for the newsreelmen.

"Judith Coplon has told you people, yes, that she's innocent," Palmer spoke for the sound-track and to a crowd assembled on the lawn. "Today a jury found her guilty. She still says she's innocent. No battle was ever won in the first round. We're taking this to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Two very important questions are involved here: One, the matter of Government workers on a jury; two, the loyalty program, the whole question of espionage in Government. There's nothing to do at the present moment but to bring an appeal and carry on.

"Anyone who looks at her, talks to her, reads her face," he said, pointing to Miss Coplon, "knows she's innocent."

"What's That Again?"

"Judy! Judy! You say something," the newsreel-men pleaded.

Palmer told her to go ahead and she spoke:

"The only thing I can say is that I'm innocent."

"What's that again?" the newsreel-men asked for a retake for the sound-track.

"The only thing that I can say is what I've always said, that I am innocent."

It was many pictures later before Miss Coplon made her way

U. S. Withdrawal Completed in Korea

All United States troops in Korea have been withdrawn after nearly four years of occupation, the Army Department disclosed last night.

The action, which has been under way for several months, was taken as the result of a 1948 United Nations ruling. The Russian-controlled north Koreangovernment had long demanded United States withdrawal while the south Korean republic had asked that American troops be held there until a south Korean army could be organized.

A small training mission of some 500 officers and men was understood to have remained to assist the Koreans in building their armed forces.

Negotiations for removal of American combat troops were begun last April at Seoul after Dr. Syngman Rhee, President of the southern republic, announced:

"Our defense forces are now rapidly approaching the point at which our security can be assured, providing that the Republic of Korea is not called upon to face attack from foreign sources."

Russia announced in September, 1948, that all Soviet troops would be out of north Korea by January 1, 1949, and suggested the United States follow suit. This Nation, however, declined to withdraw completely from Korea until legally elected governments could be established. Russia barred the U. N. election commission from its northern area.

United States troops in Korea, which had totaled some 50,000 shortly after VJ-Day, have been withdrawn gradually since, until last April only about 8000 remained. Those 8000 now have been quietly withdrawn.

China Replies To Protests On Blockade

Canton, China, June 30 (U.P.).—China today delivered an undisclosed reply to the American note challenging the Nationalist "blockade" of Communist-held Chinese ports.

Acting Foreign Minister George Yeh handed a formal reply to United States Minister Lewis Clark late today, soon after receiving a British note indorsing the American stand on "closure" of the harbors.

It was understood the reply insisted on China's right to close any port at will.

Communists Report Air Raid on Shanghai

Shanghai, June 30 (AP).—The Communists announced officially today that the toll in the Nationalists' first heavy bomber raid on Shanghai yesterday was 82 killed and 99 injured. No foreigners were reported among the casualties.

No Third Road, Says Mao as He Takes It

San Francisco, June 30 (AP).—The Chinese Communist chief, Mao Tze-Tung, declared today there was no "third road" between Communism and capitalism, and then proceeded to follow such a road himself by urging cooperation with capitalists for the present.

Mao's statement was broadcast by the Communist radio in Peiping to mark the 28th anniversary of the Chinese Communist Party.

Admiral King Going To Portsmouth Hospital

Auto Seen in Lead For Popping Question

Cincinnati, June 30 (AP).—An automobile is the favorite place for proposing marriage, Dr. Paul Popenoe told the Social Hygiene Institute at the University of Cincinnati today.

"Tabulation of 1181 proposals reveals that an automobile now is the favorite place for asking the question," he said, "because in many instances, this is the only place where a couple can find privacy."

Next on the list comes the girl's home, Dr. Popenoe added, and in close third place are engagements started on the street, in the park, restaurant or other public place.

through the crowd and across the lawn to the street and a taxacab.

Her Mother Weeps

She went from there to her hotel. In her room there, the tears that did not flow from her own eyes in court came in double measure from her mother.

"Don't get hysterical, don't get hysterical," Palmer kept saying to Mrs. Rebecca Coplon, who sat all through the trial but was not present for the verdict. "Your daughter's not afraid."

"How can I sleep tonight?" Mrs. Coplon kept repeating. "How can I sleep?"

Reference to the mother was made by Palmer in his request of Judge Reeves that sentencing of Miss Coplon here be postponed until after her trial in New York.

"I don't want to kill this mother," he shouted.

Government Opposes Delay

But the main reason he gave for asking postponement was that he could not raise another bond for Miss Coplon and she would have to go to jail. Once sentence is passed, he said, Miss Coplon's bond would be revoked. He said the money was put up by friends of hers and they would want their money back once she was sentenced.

"The Government opposes any delay of a sentence for this defendant," Kelley said sharply. "The case in New York is a mere accusation. We're dealing with reality here."

"They've got their pound of flesh!" Palmer stormed back. "Do they want the blood with it?

May Be Sentenced Today

"They may desire to have her in jail so she can't defend herself properly by conferring conveniently with her counsel," Palmer roared.

"This is not the kind of case where an Eisler skips to Europe!"

"I wish to make the position of the Government abundantly clear," Kelley said. "It is not our desire that pending the trial in New York the defendant should be confined."

The matter remained unresolved. Judge Reeves said he would consider it. Sentencing of Miss Coplon may come when court reconvenes at 10 o'clock this morning.

Dulles Says He Urged Hiss to Quit

benefit sometime after January of this year.

Today he said that Hiss told him before joining the endowment that he "thought he had put their (FBI) rumors to rest or satisfied the FBI, or some such language."

In March, 1948, five months before Chambers' public charge, Hiss appeared here before the same Federal grand jury which later indicted him, Dulles said, and he again spoke to Hiss about possible Communist affiliatons.

Hiss told him, said Dulles today, that the grand jury asked him about people he knew with possible Communist affiliation and Hiss said: "Of the persons named the only one he recalled as having any possible Communist taint was Lee Pressman, whom he had been casually associated with in practice in New York."

Pressman, former general counsel for the CIO, attended Harvard with Hiss and was one of those named by Chambers as a member of the Communist underground in Washington.

Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy and Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker both sought to turn Dulles' testimony today to their advantage.

Stryker asked him if it was true he could not be positive he had correctly recalled specific words of his conversation with Hiss, such as "satisfied." Dulles said this was true.

"But it would be a word with substantially the same meaning?" Murphy cut in.

"That's correct," replied Dulles.

In addition to Dulles, five other rebuttal witnesses were called to the stand by the prosecution today.

All were summoned to support the Government's contention that in 1938, when Hiss was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, he removed secret documents from the department to deliver to Chambers.

Sixty-four of the documents which Chambers has produced in evidence, the Government charges, were typed in the Hiss home on an old Woodstock typewriter. Chambers alleges that Mrs. Hiss, who also was a Communist, typed these for her husband.

Mrs. Hiss, who was submitted to a grueling cross-examination yesterday which almost caused her to break down on the witness stand, was recalled today for brief testimony for her third appearance in three days.

Again denying emphatically that she ever typed such documents, she was asked if she had not told the grand jury in December that the last time she recalled using the typewriter was in 1934.

She admitted she had, and was wrong on that, inasmuch as the prosecution has produced letters dated as late as May 25, 1937, and admittedly typed on the Woodstock which the Hisses now say they gave away in December, 1937.

Wearily, she said, "I have spent a lot of time ever since December, reliving the past, Mr. Murphy, and filling in . . . what I was doing in those years long ago . . ."

In resting its case with the next witness, Dr. Carl Binger, a psychiatrist on the staff of Cornell University Medical School, the defense provided an answer to a question hanging fire since just after the trial opened May 31.

During most of Whittaker Chambers' seven days of testimony, Dr. Binger was in the courtroom, observing him and jotting notes, while reporters speculated over whether he would be permitted to testify to his observations.

A tall, balding, bespectacled man, he was called to the witness stand shortly before noon, and Prosecutor Murphy immediately objected. Judge Kaufman ruled the defense could attempt to establish whether or not he should be permitted to testify.

"Have you received, or has anyone promised you, or do you expect any compensation for the time you've spent in this case?" Stryker asked Dr. Binger.

Murphy protested angrily, "That's hitting below the belt, your honor."

"I have not received compensation," said Dr. Binger, "I have not been promised compensation, and I would not accept compensation."

The stocky, sharp-tongued Stryker then announced he was going to ask Dr. Binger a "hypothetical question," and he proceeded to ask what may well be the longest question ever asked in any courtroom.

"Assume that the following facts are true," said Stryker.

For nearly 45 minutes, reading from a text, Stryker then summarized part of the accounts of Chambers' background, brought out on direct and cross-examination here.

He noted that Chambers, as a high school youth, twice a day on his way home from school "waded through a brook with his shoes and stockings on"; wrote offensive plays and essays in high school and college, joined the Communist Party in 1924.

Chambers was charged with stealing books from a library in New York, Stryker continued. He used aliases frequently throughout his life, even before joining the Communists.

He lived for a time with a Communist woman not his wife; he once stayed in a "wretched dive" in New Orleans where there was a girl named "One-eyed Annie."

As a Communist, declared Stryker, he regarded marriage as a "bourgeois convention" and opposed all religion; when he left the Communist Party (in April, 1938, Chambers says) for a year he lived "in hiding, sleeping by day and watching at night, with a gun or revolver in easy reach."

Nevertheless, at the same time, said Stryker, Chambers traveled about under his own name and even bought a house; he hollowed out a green pumpkin to hide some microfilms (which he says he received from Hiss).

He said he feared being "ambushed" when he says he came to the Hiss home in December, 1938, and tried to talk them into renouncing Communism; yet, he said they didn't know he was coming, and he says he stayed for dinner, declared Stryker.

Stryker touched on other points such as Chambers' testimony that his brother's death affected him so much that he "found it hard to move physically."

"Now, Dr. Binger," said Stryker on completing his recitation, "assuming the facts as stated in the question to be true, and taking into account your observations of Chambers on the witness stand, and your knowledge of his writings and translations, have you as a psychiatrist an opinion within the bounds of reasonable certainty as to the mental conditon of Whittaker Chambers?"

Murphy, who had made several unsuccessful attempts to interrupt Stryker, and was growng angrier by the minute, declared, "I object to the question, if your honor please. Now may I be heard on my objection?"

"Yes," answered Judge Kaufman.

"I suggested before Mr. Stryker began this long, hypothetical question at 11:55 and it is now 12:40," declared Murphy, "that he make an offer of proof in the absence of the jury because your honor had indicated to Mr. Stryker and me as lawyers that you were not going to permit the testimony of the doctor.

"I did that," Murphy stated, "because I knew or felt that the reading of a hypothetical question would afford to Mr. Stryker a summation of Mr. Chambers' testimony before the time for summation, and I deem that this opportunity that he had of reading that long, hypothetical question a grave injustice to the Government and one on which we have no right of appeal . . ."

"Now that it is in the jury's mind," declared the 6-foot 4-inch tall prosecutor, his mustache bristling, ". . . the damage is done . . ."

He declared Stryker had left out such key points as Chambers' marriage, the fact that he has been a Quaker for many years, that he is the father of two children, and "innumerable" other things so that it "is not a fair summary upon which the doctor could base his opinion."

Murphy demanded the jury be instructed to disregard the question.

"Disregard the Question"

Judge Kaufman, agreeing to bar Dr. Binger's testimony, explained his "first inclination" was to admit the testimony "because the tendency of the law is that this type of testimony be admitted."

But, he said, both prosecution and defense agree that "the credibility of Mr. Chambers is one of the crucial elements in this case" and "I think the record is sufficiently clear for the jury, using its experience in life, to appraise the testimony of all of the witnesses who have appeared in the courtroom."

He told the jury of 10 men and two women, "you may disregard the question, it is not proof of the facts except insofar as you remember the testimony."

The court adjourned for lunch a few moments later and when the

Reds' Influence On WQQW Denied

Morris Rodman, president of Radio Station WQQW, told the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday that his firm was not controlled or influenced by Communists.

Previous witnesses, who testified they owned stock in WQQW, had declined to say whether they were Communists. Rodman, in a statement yesterday, declared emphatically that he was no Communist himself and never had been.

His statement was offered for the committee's record by his attorney, Thurmond Arnold, after Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) had recessed the hearing until next Wednesday because of "physical inability" of an unnamed witness to attend. Arnold asked that Rodman be permitted to testify, but Wood pointed out that no other member was present and under a recent Supreme Court decision he could not continue without a quorum. He agreed, however, to receive Rodman's statement in evident and Arnold then released it.

Both Arnold and Rodman complained that suspicion of Communist influence had fallen on WQQW because of testimony before the committee. In his statement, Rodman continued:

"I say with all the sincerity of which I am capable that there is not a hint or trace of Red influence in the station.

"Of course, as in the case of any corporation which has many stockholders, the officers do not know all of the stockholders personally. If there are any stockholders who are Communists, I can assure you that they have not, nor are they in a position to influence the policy of the station in any way."

He said WQQW had issued 1338 shares, which were in the hands of about 200 stockholders No stockholder, he said, owned more than 50 shares and most holdings were between five and 10 shares.

On Textbook List

Gov. Tuck And Darden Disagree

Charlottesville, Va., June 30 (AP). University of Virginia President, Colgate Darden, jr., and Governor Tuck are in disagreement over disposition of a request made by the House Committee on Un-American Activities for lists of textbooks used in Virginia schools.

Darden made known today that he is currently working up a list of texts used by university students and expects to have it ready for the House committee within two weeks. Only yesterday, Governor Tuck said, if given a chance, he would have told the State Department of Education not to comply with the committee request.

The University of Virginia "is a public institution supported in good part by public funds," Darden said today.

session resumed at 2:15, Stryker immediately announced, "the defendant rests."

In calling the next five persons to the stand as rebuttal witnesses, the prosecution sought to discredit defense evidence that the Hisses disposed of their old Woodstock typewriter when they moved from 1245 30th st., Georgetown, to 3415 Volta pl. on December 29, 1947, because it was "defective."

Raymond and Perry Catlett, once employed by the Hisses for odd jobs, have testified they received the typewriter from the Hisses, and their mother, Mrs. Clytie Catlett, a former maid for the Hisses, supported their account.

The typewriter, unsuccessfully sought by the FBI and then found by the defense—or at least, what the defense claims is the same typewriter—is the key exhibit in the case.

An FBI expert has testified that documents from the Hiss home, and copies of the early 1938 State Department papers in evidence, came from the same machine.

There is one controversial gap in the alleged evidence—the fact that the last Hiss document admittedly typed on the machine is the may 25, 1937, one.

A married sister of the Catlett boys, Mrs. Bernetta Fisher, who attended Dunbar High School in Washington, appeared on the opposing side of the case today, as a prosecution witness.

She said she used the machine, which her brothers gave her, for typing biology, hygiene and chemistry notes for school.

The Hisses and Catletts have testified that the ribbon on the machine would not wind properly and that the keys jammed. Mrs. Fisher was not specifically asked how well the typewriter operated, and she could not fix the time when she received it.

Mrs. Margaret McQueen, now a New York resident and the last person known to have used the typewriter, said she also used it for school notes while attending Dunbar High. The typewriter was found in the home of her father, Ira Lockey of 722 Kenilworth ave., a former trucker, who said he got it in lieu of cash for a moving job.

She said she used it for "about two years," and noted that the keys "stuck, . . . frequently." Her husband, Stafford J. McQueen, who described himself as a "three-finger man" amid chuckles, when asked if he was a "one-finger" typist, said he also had used it on occasion.

Shown a typed application for a Federal messenger job, dated June 29, 1947, McQueen said he did not remember it, but admitted it contained his signature.

A witness was called on a point which the prosecution apparently relies on as a major attack on the defense claim that the Hisses disposed of the typewriter in 1937.

This is a challenge of Perry Catlett's testimony that soon after he received the typewriter, he took it to a repair shop "on K street at Connecticut" avenue, but could not get it fixed because parts were not available.

While Perry said the shop he went to from his home at 2728 P st. nw., was on the street floor of K st., the prosecution claims that if he went to a repair shop, it was one on the second floor of a building at the corner of Connecticut and K—and the shop was not there before September 15, 1938.

The prosecution called Henri P. Henry, employed by Randall H. Hagner & Co. of 1321 Connecticut ave., which operates the building at the corner of Connecticut and K—known as "1000 Connecticut ave."

Henry testified that for two years starting on September 15, 1938, a second-floor space in the building was occupied by a branch of the Woodstock Typewriter Co., including a repair shop.

During Henry's testimony, it was disclosed that this branch, for six months prior to that date, was located at 1528 K st. nw., a block and a half away.

This was underscored by the defense, obviously to support Perry Catlett's testimony.

Big Four Deputies Meet in London to Clear Up Last Disagreements on Austrian Treaty

Post Reporter

Deputies of the Big Four Foreign ministers resumed work in London Wednesday to clear up the last remaining disagreements over an Austrian treaty.

The Western governments are hopeful that this time, after four years of effort, the deputies will succeed. Their chief goal is to free Austria from the burden of four occupying armies, which have already saddled the Austrians with direct costs of almost half a billion dollars, plus indirect dislocation that is beyond measure.

A previously-agreed article provided that occupying forces be withdrawn within 90 days after the treaty becomes effective. This would mean the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Austria and also from Hungary and Romania, where, under the satellite treaties of 1947. they are entitled to guard communication lines to Vienna.

Only eight disputed points, all of them relatively minor, remain to be settled by the deputies, as follows:

1. The western powers want a clause in the treaty guaranteeing Austria's independence; the Russians say this is unnecessary.

2. The Russians want a clause compelling Austria, in effect, to force political refugees back to their homelands; the Western powers and the Austrians object.

3. The Russians want a clause forbidding persons of non-Austrian origin to serve in the Austrian armed forces or civil aviation. A previously agreed article limited the Austrian army to 53,000 men.

4. The French and Russians want a clause limiting Austrian production of steel, chemicals and certain heavy vehicles; the Americans and British object to such limitation.

5. No agreement has yet been reached on articles dealing with the restitution of Austrian property in Germany.

6. Likewise there is disagreement over the form of repayment of the debts of the Austrian government during the period of Nazi occupation.

7. There are minor disagreements over the ownership of patents during the same period.

8. Finally, the deputies have to agree on the form in which Russia can export the profits from her oil properties and concessions in Austria. This was a point which Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky raised at Paris, on instructions from Moscow, 15 minutes before the final communique of the Foreign Ministers' meeting was due to be released.

The Foreign Ministers agreed that Russia should have 60 per cent of Austria's oil production for 30 years, and also concession rights over 60 per cent of Austria's oil-bearing territory for eight years. If the Russians find any oil under his arrangement, they can get the output for a further 25 years.

Outwardly this looks like a harsh bargain, but it was approved in writing at Paris by Foreign Minister Karl Gruber, whose government does not regard it tragically. The Austrians had no oil production at all until the Zistersdorf fields began producing in 1938.

Today Austrian oil production is estimated at 825,000 tons a year, about one-seventh of the far more lucrative oil production of Romania.

Half-Cent Rise Due In Milk Price Today

Most Washington area consumers will pay half a cent more a quart for milk, beginning today.

In nearby Virginia, where milk prices are controlled by the Virginia State Milk Commission, the increase will be general. The boost was ordered by the commission for today, following a hearing last Friday.

The new prices of 20½ cents a quart delivered and 18½ cents in most stores also will be charged in the District and nearby Maryland today by most dairies.

These include Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Wakefield, Model Farms and Alexandria Dairies.

No decision on the price change has been made yet by officials of Embassy Dairy and the Lucerne Milk Division of Safeway Stores. These will probably continue to charge the old prices in Washington and Maryland for today at least.

Thompson's Dairy probably will increase prices Sunday instead of today, a spokesman said, as notices of the price change have not yet been sent out.

Highland Farms Dairy, which sells milk through the High's stores, will increase its price by one cent today, from 17 cents to 18 cents a quart.

The increases will apply to all types of milk, but will not apply to cream or cheese, the dairies said.

Plans Offered For Cardozo

to Wilson and keep a part in the present Cardozo plant.

Under the third plan, junior high students at Central would be shifted and divided among Langley, MacFarland, Gordon and Deal Junior High Schools.

Corning mentioned also possibility of moving the entire Cardozo student body to Roosevelt High School, at 13th and Upshur sts. nw., but he discounted this possibility.

"Roosevelt is a community high school serving a definite residential neighborhood predominantly white immediately surrounding the school," he said. "It serves also as the major recreational center for this neighborhood."

Board of Education members declined to comment on the report pending further study. Several privately said they felt Corning's arguments for Plan 3, the Cardozo-Wilson transfer, outweighed his pleas for the first two plans, involving Central High School.

Funds Provided in Budget

Pointing out that overcrowding in Negro high schools is probably a temporary situation, Corning said it should be relieved in two years when the new Spingarn High School, a Negro institution, is ready. Funds for it were provided in the 1950 District budget.

Obviously aiming for a completely fair and dispassionate consideration of the problem, Corning gave a long list of advantages and disadvantages for each plan.

He said both plans involving transfer of Cardozo to Central would provide immediate relief at the Negro institution, remove danger of loss of accreditation there, and provide specialized facilities such as gymnasiums, cafeterias and a swimming pool now lacking at Cardozo.

Protests Forecast

Temporary transfer, he said, would preserve the full building program now contemplated for Negro high schools, but permanent transfer to Central would jeopardize the proposed new $3,500,000 Cardozo building.

On the negative side, the Central transfer, he said, would displace more than 1400 present Central students; revoke certain understandings with other white junior high school students, parents and faculty; rob white students of the largest and most centrally located stadium for interscholastic athletics and cause strong protests from Central alumni.

The Board of Education by authorizing this action," Corning said, "would be acting directly to place the interests of racial groups in conflict and to cause serious racial tensions."

He pointed out also that the largest night school enrollment in any white high school would be displaced.

Cites Advantages

Advantages of Plan 3, he said, would include immediate relief from Cardozo's overcrowding; protection of its accreditation; preserve justification for a new Cardozo school; provide specialized facilities now lacking for Cardozo students; give Wilson Teachers College students "valuable laboratory experience for teachers in training" and preserve the identity of Central.

A special advantage, he pointed out, would be adherence to a recommendation in the Strayer report calling for thirteenth and fourteenth grade training facilities, equivalent to junior college work, in Washington public schools, by providing post-high school training at Central.

Disadvantages of Plan 3 listed by Corning are temporary operation of Cardozo in two centers and creation of an issue with respect to improved facilities at Miner Teachers College. This is a Negro institution at Georgia ave. and Euclid st. nw. It would raise objections by parents of junior high school students now at Central.

Public Hearings Slated

C. Melvin Sharpe, Boar dof Education president, said the board will hold a special meeting "sometime this summer" to decide which of the proposals to indorse. After the board's tentative decision, he said, public hearings will be held before it is made permanent.

In other actions yesterday, board committees approved the purchase of reading clinic equipment, lunchroom equipment for elementary schools, agreed to ask additional personnel to administer the sick-leave program in event it becomes law this year, and accepted conditionally an offer of the National Symphony Orchestra to sponsor free children's concert next year.

The full board will hold its final meeting today at 9 a. m. to act on yesterday's committee actions and to swear in new board members.

Maryland Aims to Have Best Roads in Nation

New York, June 30 (AP).—Maryland plans to regain the position it once held as the Nation's "best roads" State through Governor Lane's multi-million dollar highway program.

Representatives of the country's large financial institutions were told this today by Chairman Robert M. Reindollar of the Maryland State Roads Commission. He was the principal speaker before the Municipal Bond Forum.

Bidder Complains

Glenn Dale Milk Deal Is Revoked

Award of a contract for furnishing a three-month supply of milk to the District-operated Glenn Dale Sanitarium was revoked by the Commissioners yesterday after a protest was received from a losing bidder.

Purchasing Officer Roland J. Brennan said the Wakefield Dairy, 41 L st. se., second-lowest bidder on the contract, complained that the winner, the Harvey Dairy, Inc., 38th and Perry sts., Brentwood, Md., could not guarantee that all milk supplied would come from District-inspected farms. The contract terms require such assurance, Brennan said.

Brennan said the revocation will not affect the award of contracts to the Wakefield Dairy and the Richfield Dairy Corp., 1230 South Capitol st., for milk supplies to other District institutions.

After a conference with Commissioner Guy Mason, Brennan said the specifications will be revised for the contract and new bids will be opened on Wednesday. In the interim, the Richfield firm, present supplier, will continue delivering milk at present prices until July 9.

Senate Atlantic Pact Debate Begins Tuesday

The Senate yesterday made the North Atlantic Pact the "pending order of business" and will open debate on it next Tuesday.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said he is prepared to lead the floor fight for ratification of the 12-nation treaty. The Senate moved to the treaty after wrapping up the labor legislation bill sponsored by Senator Taft (R., Ohio). The pact will become binding on the United States if approved by a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

Freedmen's Hospital Now Member of GHI

Freedmen's Hospital here today becomes a participating hospital of Group Hospitalization, Inc., under an agreement announced yesterday by Joseph H. Himes, president of GHI.

The contract gives GHI subscribers full coverage of all hospital service benefits available at Freedmen's, regardless of costs, as covered by the subscriber's policy, Himes explained. Heretofore, he said, such service at Freedmen's was available on a non-participating hospital allowance, which did not always cover full cost.

3 Judgeships For District Are Approved

A congressional conference committee agreed yesterday to set up three new District Court judgeships here, but postponed decision on special qualifications proposed for filling the jobs.

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) said a further meeting would be held to discuss the Senate-approved provisions which he sponsored to fill the three District Court judgeships with lawyers from private practice.

Members said House conferees raised a question about the constitutionality of the McCarran plan, contending that it would infringe upon the constitutional power of the President to select Federal judgeship nominations for presentation to the Senate.

In fixing the number of additional District judges here at three, the conference group sided with the Senate decision, and backed the recommendation of the judges of District Court here. The House had granted two additional judges.

The bill also provides three more judges for the United States Court of Appeals for the District, plus a score of other Federal judgeships elsewhere. Both Houses have approved the three appellate judges, and the private practice qualifications do not affect them.

In another action yesterday, members of the District Bar Association renewed their appeals for approval of House bills to add three judges to the Municipal Court, now a 10-man bench.

The testimony was heard by the House District Judiciary subcommittee which is considering two Municipal Court judgeship bills.

Austin Canfield, former president of the local bar association, urged committee members to visit Municipal Court if they have any doubt about the need for additional personnel.

"The calendar is bogged down. It is getting worse every day and witnesses are even leaving town," said Canfield.

Jewish Appeal Drive Raises $1,850,000

Collections and pledges of approximately $1,850,000 were reported during the formal drive of the United Jewish Appeal here, it was announced last night.

The announcement was made by Joseph Cherner, general chairman, at the final meeting of the campaign at Indian Springs Country Club.

Cherner told the gathering of 500, representing all divisions of campaign workers, that this year's figure topped that of last year during the formal campaign by about 10 per cent.

The total collections in Washington last year were $2,180,000. This year the Washington goal is $2,500,000 and it is expected that this quota will be reached during the informal campaign which will continue through the year.

Better School Group Elects In Arlington

Reed K. Pond, 45-year-old Department of Agriculture economist, last night was elected chairman of the Arlington Citizens Committee for School Improvement.

He succeeds B. Alden Lillywhite. Pond lives at 3722 N. 24th st., Arlington. He is president of the Parkway Citizens Association and chairman of the public safety committee of the Arlington Civic Federation.

Other committee officers, elected during a meeting at the St. George Parish House, 908 N. Nelson st., were:

Mrs. Markham Hanchette, vice chairman; John Kangas, recording secretary; Mrs. Malcolm Miller, corresponding secretary; James C. Pettee, treasurer, and Oscar R. LeBeau, historian.

Retiring Chairman Lillywhite told the meeting that the committee now has 752 paid members.

Contracts Are Let For Burials of D. C. Indigents

District Purchasing Officer Roland J. Brennan yesterday announced the award of contracts for burial of Negro and white indigents on District relief rolls.

Bids were solicited from all funeral directors in the area after Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the District Committee, contended that existing contracts were not competitive and were too costly.

The Walsh funeral home, 741 11th st. se., was awarded a contract on a $11,700 bid for burial of an estimated 80 white indigents during the fiscal year. Malvin & Schey, Inc., 424 R st. nw., received a similar contract on an $8600 bid for burial of an estimated 130 Negro indigents. Both contracts are subject to the final approval of the Commissioners, Brennan said.

Streetcar Strike Off

away and insisting that Ching's proposal was fair and reasonable and finally won a big cheer from the crowd.

P. J. O'Brien, international executive committeeman of the union, then spoke and seconded Oliver's recommendation. He was booed by some, cheered by others.

"With what's going on up on Capitol Hill," he warned, "we have to move carefully. All eyes on Capitol Hill are focused on this meeting."

Vote Is Delayed

A motion to accept the arbitration plan was made from the floor at 12:50 a.m. but the confusion delayed an immediate vote.

Some members cried, "We can't hear. We don't know what we are voting for or against."

Then a series of rank and file members, former officers and present leaders of the local arose and one after another called upon the membership to accept the Ching plan.

"We can prove our cause to any size board," declared Walter Bierwagen of Greenbelt, a bus driver, in a booming voice. He pointed out that it was the U. S. Conciliation Service which selected the impartial chairman of a three-man arbitration board after two strikes in 1945 which gave the union a 19-cent-an-hour pay raise.

John T. Souder, another operator, of 1727 3rd st. ne., said, "Your threw me off the platform when I stood up here in 1945. If we walk out tomorrow, we walk out to our damn sorrow."

N. Albert Jenkins, a member of both the union's executive board and contract committee, warned, "Strike tomorrow and you may still be walking the streets 30 days from tomorrow."

If the union members had rejected the Ching plan and voted to strike instead—as they twice did in 1945 during a contract dispute—the walkout would have brought to a standstill every one of the company's 1100 buses and 300 streetcars, probably within an hour and a half of the strike vote.

Both company and union had agreed to arbitrate the current dispute but had been unable to agree on procedure.

Negotiations Began May 10

The deadlocked negotiations between Capital Transit and the union—which have had contractual relations since the company was organized in 1933—began May 10, when Division 689 asked for a 25 cents an hour increase for all its members, together with such "fringe" benefits as sickness and accident insurance, hospitalization and death insurance, an increased night-work pay differential, liberalized holiday pay, and others.

The company asserted that the pay raise and other benefits, if granted, would cost the public utility company four million dollars a year, a sum Capital Transit insists it can not pay out without a hike in fare.

Capital Transit countered the union's demands with its own request that certain "economies" be effected in Capital Transit's operations through the cooperation of the union, and thereby reduce CTC operating costs by the yearly sum of $500,000.

The suggested "economies," it was pointed out by a company spokesman, would affect principally the streetcar operating crews. The "economies," the spokesman said, "would result in a little more work for the operators, but with no loss in take-home pay. In effect, the spokesman added, the "economies" would eliminate what the company describes as "featherbedding" practices by the union.

As the negotiations progressed, however, the company negotiators informally offered to convert the "economies," if carried out, into a 5-cents-an-hour raise in pay for the maintenance men and operators.

The union rejected the company's informal offer—just as it had previously denied that any of its operating practices were in the "featherbedding" category. The "economies" which the company wanted to carry out would be done at the union's expense, a spokesman for Division 689 insisted, and from the union's point of view would cost more than 5 cents an hour.

Nonetheless during the course of the contract discussion, union negotiators also informally lowered their sights and offered to recommend to the membership a settlement based on a flat 10 cents an hour raise in pay. This offer was turned down by the company.

Finally, both union and company got around to proposing arbitration.

Division 689 offered to settle the entire dispute—covering all the issues of the new contract—through a three-man arbitration board, made up of t herepresentatives from union and company and headed by an impartial chairman.

Capital Transit offered to arbitrate the major point of the dispute—wages—through a five-man arbitration board, consisting of one representative from each company and union, and three distinguished local citizens "who are not professional arbitrators." The three residents would be selected from a panel of nine, three of which would be named by the chief judge of the U. S. District Court; three by the director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service; and three by the president of the Federation of Citizens Association.

The union's three-man arbitration board would of a necessity be composed of professional arbitrators, the company argued, and the impartial chairman, no matter how impartial he might be, is nonetheless under the necessity of granting at least some new benefits to the union, or else face the possibility of being blackballed for future arbitration work by other unions.

Officials of Division 689 scoffed at the company's comments, and insisted that in recent months there have been several decisions by arbitrators granting no pay increases to the unions.

The union argues, with some heat, that for many years now the management of Capital Transit and Division 689 have settled their differences through the three-man arbitration. Furthermore, the union alleges, there's an arbitration clause in the old contract which provides for arbitration of all disagreements, including any dispute over a new contract.

Capital Transit insists that the arbitration clause refers only to matters of dispute involving disagreements arising out of that particular contract, and has nothing to do with a new contract. The union counters with the assertion that it has company-endorsed interpretations of the clause backing up the union contention.

The controversial clause is the first part of Section 2 under general terms of the agreement signed June 14, 1948, between CTC and the union, expiring at midnight.

The clause is as follows:

"It is hereby agreed that properly accredited officers of the company shall meet and treat with properly accredited committees or officers of the association (union), who may be employes of the company or general officers of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, on all questions and grievances that may arise during the life of this agreement, and should there be any question or grievances that cannot be amicably adjusted by said conferences, the same shall be submitted to a board of arbitration composed of three persons, one to be chosen by the company, one to be chosen by the association, and the two thus selected to select a third disinterested arbitrator who shall be representative of the public; the findings of a majority of the said board of arbitration to be final and binding on the parties thereto."

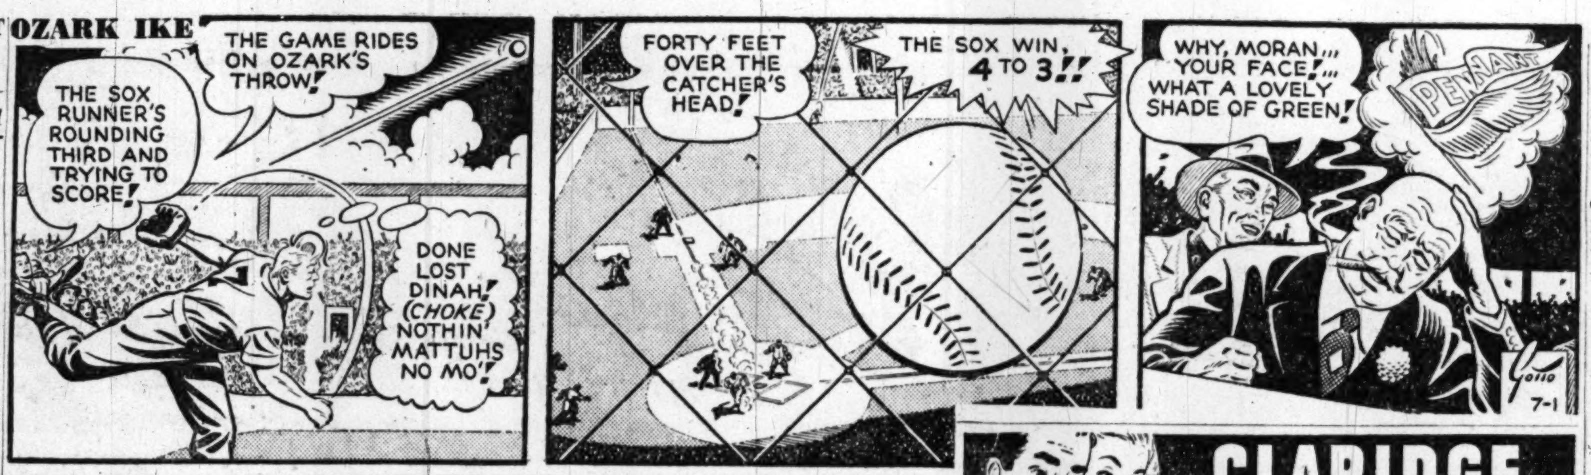
4300 Are Involved

Involved in the dispute are 4300 of Capital Transit's 5000 employes. Division 689 bargains for the 2900 bus and street car operators, and for the 1400 maintenance men. Also involved is the public. Some 600,000 Washington area residents take a million rides daily on the Capital Transit System which services Washington and nearby Maryland.

Present Wage Scale

CTC operators presently get $1.37 an hour for the first three months' service; $1.41 for the next nine months' service, and $1.45 an hour thereafter. Because of the opportunity to earn extra, according to the company, the average take-home pay of the operators is $63 a week for a five-day 40-hour week. Nonoperating union employes get from $1.58 an hour for AA mechanics to $1.02 an hour for watchmen.

The company estimates that for each one-cent increase in the hourly rate of pay its annual operating cost will rise by about $115,000. Since 1940 there have been seven increases in the basic operator's rate from 79 cents to $1.45 an hour. Three of the contract disputes were settled by three-man arbitration boards. There were two strikes by the employes in 1945, one lasting 30 hours, the second 12 hours. The second walkout was ended when the President seized the transit company under his emergency war powers. Predecessor companies of the utility had a strike in 1918.



Archbishop Criticizes Birth Control Advice

York, Eng., June 30 (AP).—Birth control advice "should not be forced" on people who don't want it, the Archbishop of York wrote today.

He was critizing before the York diocesan conference a recent report by a royal commission on population which called on the state to give free birth control advice to all.

The archbishop, Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, said everyone who wants birth control advice can get it now. He said one reason for the fall in the British birth rate is that "there are some who wish for the pleasures of marriage without its responsibilities."

Lodge Fails in Fight On New Senate Look

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) looked up at the antique glass panels of the Senate ceiling yesterday and observed that the idea of replacing them with stainless steel was "very disconcerting."

Thereupon, he made two efforts to block plans for changing the appearance of the Senate chamber, losing both times on points of order raised by Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) sustained by Vice President Barkley and enforced finally by Senate votes.

The first decision led Senator Lodge to say he was being "choked off" and was going to have a few things to say about the chamber remodeling plans.

Lodge proposed adding to an appropriations resolution, making funds available for agencies whose bills have not yet cleared, a rider to prevent changing the appearance of the Senate chamber any more than was required by the new roof, and improvements in lighting, ventilating and acoustics.

McKellar told him he was a little too late, the move should have been tied with the legislative money bill.

Virginia's Books For Registration Close Saturday

Virginians who want to register to vote in the August 2 primary must do so before registrars' offices close Saturday.

In Alexandria, the registrar's office in the City Hall will be open today from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and on Saturday from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.

The Fairfax County registrar will be available from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. today, and from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Saturday. In Arlington, the hours today are 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m, and 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Saturday. Arlington precinct registrars will sit in their homes during the same hours Saturday.

Long and Short Bandits Foiled at Dupont Circle

A hatchet-faced tall man and an untidy short man were sought by police last night for the attempted holdup of two men in a 10th floor office of the Dupont Circle Building.

In the office were Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, president of the Institute of American Trade, and Jerry Menkus, public relations man, connected with the firm for six weeks.

Menkus said the two men came in about 3:30 p. m. and asked for "Mr. Minks." The shorter then drew Dr. Ruth into a side office, while the tall man (described as being about 6 feet 6½ inches) drew a revolver from his inside coat pocket and informed Menkus: "This is a holdup."

Menkus said he struck the man in the stomach, making him double up. During the scuffle, the gun went off, the bullet apparently traveling out through an open window. The men then fled down the hall.

Snyder to Leave For Europe Trip On Saturday

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder will fly to Paris Saturday for a European tour, it was announced yesterday. The British economic crisis at once centered attention on his visit to London.

Snyder, accompanied by his principal advisers, will visit Brussels, Stockholm, Berne, Rome, Cairo and possibly Athens and Ankara. The announced purpose is to visit the Treasury's offices so Snyder can get a first hand idea of his men's problems and needs.

However, Snyder also will pay calls on finance ministers and other top officials of the Western European nations. Dates of the visits on the two-week trip were not given.

An authoritative source said that Snyder will present no United States demands to the British, but that he will tell British leaders plainly the United States is convinced that free exchange of national currencies is necessary for world improvement.

Trinidad Boys Elect 3 to Board, Plan Fund Appeal

The Trinidad Boys Club last night elected three new board executives at a reorganization meeting and mapped plans to raise funds.

Elected president of the board was Ralph E. Payne, District government employe. Carl B. Smyser was chosen vice president, Mrs. Emma Fulk, secretary.

Reelected were Edward R. Fulk, treasurer, and Fred E. Nalley, executive director.

Although the club has had to cut monthly expenses from $800 to $150 and eliminate evening functions, Fulk said "we have hopes that we will be able to carry on." He said fund-raising plans were outlined at the meeting and would be announced at a later time.

Three Youths Held On Rape Charges

Three nearby Maryland youths yesterday were held for Prince Georges County grand jury action on rape charges involving two Hyattsville girls, 12 and 15 years old.

Bound over were Robert H. King, 20, of 3700 Upshur st., Brentwood; James E. Largent, 21, of 4108 33rd st., Mt. Rainier, and Carl M. Caudell, 19, of 5028 Geranimo st., Berwyn. Caudell waived preliminary hearing.

Girl Tells of Threat

In Hyattsville Police Court, King and Largent denied having relations with the younger girl, but admitted trying to have intercourse with the older girl. Both said they were unsuccessful, despite the fact she gave her consent.

The 15-year-old girl told the court she submitted to the boys' advances, after they threatened to leave her alone on a secluded road, where their automobile was parked.

Juvenile Court Investigating

The younger girl said she was not molested by either of the two boys present at yesterday's hearing. She said, however, she was attacked by a third youth.

Prince Georges' authorities are holding another boy, a juvenile, in connection with the alleged attack. His case, is being investigated by the Juvenile Court.

Scott to Testify

State Rests In Roanoke Death Trial

Judge Samuel R. Price — Dr. Charles M. Irvin

Jurist and coroner testify

Roanoke, Va., June 30 (AP).—The State rested its case against Lee Scott today and defense counsel announced the darkly handsome defendant would take the stand to tell his own "mental blackout" story of the slaying of Dana Marie Weaver.

Only about a dozen of the 33 witnesses the prosecution had said it would call had testified when Commonwealth's Attorney C. E. Cuddy said he had finished his case.

Announcement that Scott would testify came earlier while rival counsel sparred before the jury on whether they should accept as true the high school athlete's story told under truth serum. The story was that he suffered a "partial amnesia" when he met and struggled with his blonde classmate in the kitchen of Christ Episcopal Church.

Defense Motion Lost

And it followed the testimony of S. R. Price, police magistrate, who said Scott admitted meeting the girl at the church on the evening of May 8 only after he said to the boy while alone with him at his office:

"Lee, you killed that child and she branded you indelibly."

Scott had a long, deep scratch on his right cheek when arrested.

A defense motion to strike evidence in the case as it related to first-degree murder was overruled by Judge Dirk A. Kuyk late today.

The announcement of Defense Chief T. Warren Messick that Scott would take the stand was made when a juror wanted to know what route Scott usually followed home from church, where he sang in the choir.

A witness, Fred Bradley, Scott's chum, had just testified he saw Scott in the alley behind the Bradley home near the church on that Sunday evening Dana Marie was slain. It was suggested that Bradley be recalled to the stand.

Scott to Take Stand

But Messick said that would not be necessary—he intended calling his husky client as a witness.

The prosecution during the fourth day hit back at the defense position that the slaying took place while the poker-faced Scott was in a mental blackout.

It brought out testimony from a medical witness that it was unlikely Scott's consciousness would flick on and off during the time he slugged his classmate with a pop bottle and then choked her.

Dr. Charles M. Irvin, city coroner, said: "As far as some special event is concerned, I don't think amnesia can be partial. It is my opinion it is not partial. If you remember part of a sequence of things, you could remember all."

Messick said he would show the young athlete suffered "partial amnesia" and was in a fog after he struck the girl as they stood in the second-floor kitchen of the church building.

Puerto Rico Governor Sails for Visit to U. S.

San Juan, P. R., June 30 (U.P.).—Gov. Luis Munoz Marin left today for the United States on a three to four-week visit combining business and vacation.

Munoz sailed for New York aboard the S.S. Ines, accompanied by his wife, two young daughters and island officials.

Birth Control Use By Less Educated Is Reported Up

By the United Press

The Population Reference Bureau said yesterday birth control is spreading rapidly among lower-education groups.

It said the reproduction rate of college graduates increased 81 per cent between 1940 and 1947, compared with an increase of only 29 per cent for women with five years of grammar school education.

The United States Census Bureau, meantime, reported that the Nation's population has increased almost 13 per cent since the last census nine years ago. The estimated total May 1 was 148,711,000 compared with 131,169,275 in 1940. The bureau said the population increased 765,000 during the first four months of this year—about the same rate for the first months last year.

British Ban Schacht

Goettingen, Germany, June 30 (U.P.).—British authorities today banned scheduled addresses here by Hjalmar Schacht, Hitler's one-time financial wizard, after angry trade union officials predicted there would be "trouble" if he spoke.

Weakness for Wine, Autos, Ice Cream Jails Takoma Park Man

A weakness for wine and a fondness for ice cream landed a Takoma Park man in Hyattsville jail yesterday, to await Prince Georges County grand jury action on auto theft and storebreaking charges.

Henry G. Barrett, 38, alias "Snake" Brown, of 3 4th st., Takoma Park, was remanded to jail in lieu of $1000 bond after pleading guilty to the charges before Judge Henry O'Neil in Hyattsville Police Court. A third charge, involving theft of a truck, is under investigation by the FBI, police said.

Barrett, according to police, admitted theft of 21 pints of ice cream and 96 popsicles from the Pinecrest Market, Takoma Park, when he "developed a sweet tooth" after becoming fortified with wine last Saturday night. Police said he first stole a panel truck, but drove it into a ditch while leaving the scene of the theft. He then stole an automobile at a nearby home.

Police said they were called in by neighbors when Barrett reportedly tried to steal still another automobile at a Riggs rd. apartment development when the car he had been driving burned out a clutch.

Booked as a suspected auto thief, Barrett was linked to the storebreaking by ice cream smears found on several autos near the scene of his arrest, according to Detective Earl J. Huber, who investigated.

Panderer Sentenced To 20-60 Months

Ellis Wright, 50, of 1404 Swann st. nw., was sentenced yesterday to serve from 20 to 60 months in prison for pandering here.

According to police, Wright arranged four dates for a woman here and exacted part of her proceeds from prostitution. The officers said that he had boasted that he had been engaged in similar activity for many years. Sentencing was by Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court.

Given 3 to 9 Years

In another case, Matthew Vance, 54, of 1262½ Half st. se., was given three to nine years in prison for shooting and wounding a man with a rifle.

Moses Terrell, jr., 21-year-old deaf mute, was sentenced to serve 16 months to four years for the street robbery of Norman Frazier, of Quantico, Va., from whom a wrist watch was taken.

Charles Walker, 37, whose address was listed as 914 1st st. nw., was given three to nine years for assaulting two men with an ice-pick.

Garris Gets New Trial

Charles J. Garris, 29, was granted a new trial yesterday in District Court on a charge of taking indecent liberties with his six-year-old daughter. Judge Edward M. Curan ruled that the defendant's wife, Mrs. Patricia Garris, had given prejudicial testimony in response to prosecution questions during his recent trial.

Red Conspiracy Trial Defendant Admits He Lied

New York, June 30 (AP).—Gilbert Green of Chicago, Communist conspiracy trial defendant, underwent cross-examination today after 13 days of direct testimony and admitted he once lied under oath.

Quizzed by United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey, Green agreed he had made a number of false statements in applying for a Chicago postoffice job in 1927.

Under McGohey's prodding, he admitted numerous statements in the application were untrue. One was that his name was George Gilbert.

He had testified on direct examination he was born Gilbert Greenberg, but changed his name to Green because of racial prejudice.

The cross-examination also developed that Green at one time entered into a common law marriage.

U. S. Intensifies Pressure on Israel In Refugee Issue

Tel Aviv, June 30 (NYHT).—The American State Department is continuing pressure on Israeli government to say how many Arab refugees it is prepared to let back inside Israel.

The determination of both governments not to give way might well lead to a serious crisis in Israel's relations with the United States.

Foreign Minister Moshe Sharrett has announced that Arab families would be reunited and he reportedly told the United States that 30,000 to 40,000 Arabs would come within this category.

So far none have returned legally to Israeli territory and it will be many days hence before suitable machinery is established.

Massachusetts Woolen Industry Jobs Up by 10%

Boston, June 30 (AP).—An employment upturn of nearly 11 per cent in Massachusetts' woolen and worsted industry was reported today by the State Department of Labor and Industries.

The department said employment increased in mid-May by 10.8 per cent over mid-April and for the first time this year reversed a downward trend that had continued since January.

Total wages paid also increased in May over April, aggregating 10.1 per cent.

The survey showed the employment decline in the industry reached a low point in April when more than 13,000 workers had lost their jobs they held in January.

Spur To Confidence

The Federal Reserve authorities have decided to be consistently antideflationary in their policies. Their Open Market Committee announces that future purchases and sales of Government securities by the Federal Reserve Banks will be directed "with primary regard to the general business and credit situation." While the policy of maintaining "orderly" conditions in the Government security market will continue, the committee says that under present conditions, maintenance of a relatively fixed pattern of rates has the "undesirable effect of absorbing reserves from the market at a time when the availability of credit should be increased."

Here is reassuring evidence that the Federal reserve authorities recognize a responsibility to do what they can to restore business confidence by taking positive action to expand commercial credit. In recent months the Federal Reserve Banks have been selling large amounts of Government bonds in pursuance of their stabilization policy. The effect of lowered reserve requirements for member banks has thus been offset by increased purchases of Government securities by banks whose reserves have been swollen by sharp declines in business loans as well as by lower reserve requirements. In short, the system's attempt to combat the current deflationary trend has been stymied by the stabilization policy. Now that the Open Market Committee has decided to modify its selling policy, the banks will be under greater pressure to expand commercial loans in order to put their idle funds to work. Moreover, the new policy will make for somewhat lower interest rates and provide an incentive for increased business loans.

Particularly important, however, is the psychological effect of the change in policy. It conveys a message of reassurance to busi nessmen, alarmed by recent sharp declines in commodity prices. It shows that the Federal reserve authorities are ready to adapt their policies to the needs of the times. To be sure, there has not been any lack of loanable bank funds to support an expansion of credit, but there has been a lack of confidence in the outlook for business recovery—a growing pessimism aggravated by the refusal of the Administration to recognize that the need of the moment is not a program for control of inflation but positive action to arrest deflation.

This is the sixth time during the past four months that Federal Reserve officials have taken steps to counteract the deflationary trend. Early in March and again in April, controls over consumer installment credit were relaxed. At the end of March stock market margin requirements were reduced; a month later member bank reserve requirements were lowered, releasing about 1.2 billion dollars of reserves. In mid-May the board cut margin requirements for purchases of securities under subscription rights. Finally there is the decision to modify the stabilization policy, announced just before the release of 800 million dollars of member bank reserves following expiration of the authority temporarily granted the board last summer to impose supplemental reserve requirements.

British Dilemma

Not the least of Britain's troubles is the difficulty of explaining in language that the average man can understand why the British government opposes ECA proposals to modify the existing intra-European payments arrangement. The most lucid and comprehensive statement of the nature of the problem and the reasons for the British objections to changes in the present payments plan that has been brought to our attention comes from the British Embassy.

This statement points out that Britain is a creditor nation in her current dealings with Europe. In conformity with the arrangements in force during the past year to facilitate financing of intra-European trade, Britain has accordingly made grants to her debtors, when necessary, up to the amount of the surpluses due her, using for that purpose so-called counterpart funds set aside against dollar-aid receipts. For example, suppose country X's trade deficit with Great Britain amounted to 50 million dollars. To enable that country to pay its debt the British would grant it drawing rights in sterling equal to the amount of the deficit. By such means the creditor state, Great Britain, would, as the British Embassy explains, be able in effect to pass on a part of the aid received from the United States to its own European debtors, not in the form of dollars, but in the form of goods which the British themselves produce.

The ECA, however, declares that the effect of this arrangement has been to throttle competition. Countries indebted to Great Britain, it says, in order to use their drawing rights have to buy British goods, often at higher prices than those prevailing elsewhere. This leads to uneconomic forms of trade discrimination and undoubtedly delays return to the system of multilateral trading that is the professed goal of British as well as American policy. Consequently, with a view to breaking down some of the barriers to competitive trade that now exist, American officials want to provide for partial transferability of the drawing rights accorded European debtor countries.

This proposal would permit France, a debtor country, to transfer part of her sterling drawing rights to Belgium or some other continental trading nation or even spend a portion of such balances in dollar areas. In either case the British protest that the creditor state would be called on to give up gold or dollars to the country where the grants had been spent. Apparently their objections have produced results. For a late dispatch from Paris states that a "complete agreement," believed to be based largely on the principles advocated by Sir Stafford Cripps, has been reached by ECA countries in their efforts to stimulate intra-European trade.

We do not profess to know the answer to what appears to be an insoluble puzzle. The British have good reason to fear any relaxation of trade restrictions that would entail further drains on their rapidly dwindling gold and dollar reserves. Moreover, they maintain that European trade which has expanded and been extremely profitable to the British under a bilateral system of trade pacts that is the antithesis of multilateralism would be harmed rather than helped by the introduction of dollar competition at this time. "Everything will have to be geared down to the level of what we can afford in those of our dealings which cost us dollars," they warn, "and this will be true of most other countries in Europe."

For the short run, that is no doubt true. But the question that has to be answered—the question that Congress will ask—is whether the United States is justified in continuing to cover the dollar deficits of countries that are retreating from, instead of advancing toward, a system of freer world trade by building up an isolated rival sterling trade area under the leadership of the chief beneficiary of the dollar-aid program. It is to be hoped that some compromise of opposing views can be reached that will at least mark the beginning of a movement in the right direction—toward freer world trade.

Coplon Verdict

The jurors who, after 10 weeks of listening to evidence and watching the melodramatic or clownish antics of counsel, and after nearly 27 hours of argument among themselves, found Miss Judith Coplon guilty upon both counts of her indictment have rendered a momentous service to the cause of civil liberty. They deserve, therefore, the gratitude of all to whom those liberties are precious. A great deal more was at stake in this case than the personal fate of Miss Coplon, which is perhaps no great matter. One of the things at stake was the whole principle of trial by jury.

Rarely has the intelligence of a jury been so grossly insulted as was this one's by the character of Miss Coplon's defense. There was, first of all, the assumption that the jurors were so thoroughly saturated with Hollywood mystique that they would accept every sort of indiscretion as normal and reasonable, if they could be satisfied that it was committed in the name of art and of true love. When Mr. Palmer's ingenious hypothesis was exploded by the Government, which produced evidence that Miss Coplon had been guilty of still other indiscretions—scarcely to be reconciled with the script as prepared—the one remaining hope was to produce a division among the jury, by playing upon the sentimentalities or prejudices of some members of it. This is a device frequently resorted to by criminal lawyers with desperate cases, and some of them, like the late William J. Fallon, have employed it with extraordinary success.

Mr. Palmer's technique was of course cruder and more obvious than Fallon's. But the case of Miss Coplon was far more important than the sort of cases—racketeers, big-time gamblers, venal politicians—in which Fallon specialized; and this is why it was stretched out over so many weeks at such great expense. It had significant international implications, and for this reason its progress was followed intently by persons of every sort all over the world.

The very nature of the charges against Miss Coplon were suggestive of a serious weakness within the Government, and had she been acquitted after the evidence brought against her that weakness might have seemed irreparable. Had the jury failed to agree on its verdict, the Government would have been faced with the choice of dropping the case entirely or preparing for another protracted trial, either here or in New York (where Miss Coplon has been indicted with her Russian acquaintance, Gubitchev) and leading perhaps to a similarly indecisive result. It would certainly have been discouraged from bringing prosecutions in other cases where the evidence was as strong as in Miss Coplon's case.

But in the present state of fear and excitement over the Communist conspiracy, which sometimes seems uncomfortably close to panic, this might easily have led to clamor for a modification of the principle of jury trial in political cases—perhaps to a demand for special tribunals, perhaps merely to proposals for a rule that a majority vote of the jurors suffice for convictions. And such innovations would certainly mean a very large advance on the road to the police state.

Knight Of The Pen

We mourn the passing of the American-owned Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury, closed down as the result, apparently, of Communist intimidation. Evidently the closure was forced indirectly. A long report in the London Times from its Hongkong correspondent says, "In two letters, one to the staff and the other to the Military Control Commission, the editor of the Post and Mercury, Mr. Randall Gould, a veteran American newspaperman in China, said it was impossible to continue if the employes refused to accept his authority." The British newspaper comments: "So ends a newspaper which has for long been a feature of life in Shanghai; it was never afraid to speak its mind, whether the targets of its criticism were the Japanese, the Nationalists, or the Communists."

Far be it from us to lag behind a British newspaper in paying tribute to the courageous Mr. Randall Gould and his responsible journalism. It is difficult for stay-at-homes to realize the service that American newspapers published abroad do for the United States. It is very considerable. In the passing of this Shanghai newspaper a particularly powerful unofficial ambassador has been extinguished. Mr. Gould's news policy and commentaries gave Shanghai an enlightening budget of happenings in America and the views of an enlightened American. Nobody needs the knowledge that this newspaper could have imparted more than the purblind Chinese Communists themselves, and their loss is as great as America's.

This newspaper has special reason to regret the demise of the Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury. Scarcely an editorial on China has appeared in our columns in the last three years that has not been reprinted in our Far Eastern contemporary. Mr. Gould has been more than generous in his references to those editorials, and, since he lived and worked on the spot, those references have been very gratifying. We hope his silencing in Shanghai will be only temporary.

Virginian Prodigy

At the age of 63, Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman has retired as editor of the Richmond News-Leader in order to devote his whole time, or such part of it as may not be required for travel, or for lecturing about history and military strategy, or for accepting new academic honors, to his monumental life of George Washington. To many a man of Dr. Freeman's age this will hardly sound much like retirement; but such things are relative, and, compared to the schedule he has been following these many years, it will perhaps be the equivalent of a dignified, tranquil leisure. Dr. Freeman himself insists that his retirement will not necessarily mean any diminution of his net productivity. He is merely "changing over," or, as it were, retooling himself, for another kind of product.

According to Dr. Freeman's intimates, his intellectual working day has begun at 3:15 in the morning and ended at 6 in the evening, with time out for lunch, a daily radio broadcast, a brief afternoon nap. Each morning he read all the news dispatches and wrote two or three columns of editorial comment and a radio script about them, consulted with his staff, received visitors, attended to correspondence and all the rest of the usual editorial routine. After his nap he labored on his books, and was always, it is said, well ahead of the stiff schedule he had set for himself.

Probably nothing like this in the way of literary industry has been heard of since Anthony Trollope, who, as he relates in his autobiography, worked with his watch in front of him to maintain his quota of something like 300 words per quarter hour, and who when he wrote "The End" on the last page of a manuscript, without even pausing for a sigh of satisfaction, reached for a fresh sheet of paper and wrote "Chapter One." But then, of course, Trollope had the advantage of being able to work steadily upon one thing until he had finished it, which until now Dr. Freeman has not had.

All this must sound strange and rather wonderful to those writers to whom hard work, especially if it involves some degree of cerebration, is usually accompanied by a sense of physical exhaustion. The difficulty is that writers with such prodigious energy as Trollope and Dr. Freeman are never quite able to explain the secret of it. They are usually content to say that it is a form of self-discipline in concentration, apparently somewhat after the fashion of Yoga. This is doubtless true as far as it goes, but not many are capable of writing both fluently and well. "Easy writing, hard reading" and "hard writing, easy reading" have been for some centuries the maxims of the trade.

Possibly, then, men like Dr. Freeman are spiritual survivors of some more heroic age, when there was really a spontaneous association of thought and language. Those were the days when it was possible to say things so readily and so well that whatever one said was destined to become a cliche, and all future generations of writers would be obliged to rack their brains, exacerbate their nerves and surrender their sleep in the effort to avoid repeating it.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Home Rule Promise

For generations it has been a Democratic principle that a platform promise was a party pledge.

In the platform of 1892 the plank relating to the District of Columbia states: "The Democratic Party believes in home rule and the control of their own affairs by the people of the vicinage."

In 1896 the party platform states: "The Democratic Party believes in home rule . . ."

In 1908 and 1912 there were similar platform statements of principle.

In 1940, 1944 and 1948 the Democratic platform pledged as a party principle: "We favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia."

These platform promises were approved by the Committee on Platform, submitted to the whole convention and adopted. Certainly here is an expression of party principle expressed over a half century of convention gatherings. Obviously a principle emphasized and reemphasized for more than 50 years should appear to be binding upon all Democratic members of a Democratic Congress who believe that a promise repeatedly made should be kept and a principle continually stated should be considered fundamental in party doctrine.

Footnotes of History

The able and usually accurate Mr. Walter Lippmann was shocked and mortified when he learned that another President besides John Quincy Adams had served in Congress—Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, whose public career, and life, ended in the United States Senate. Did he also overlook Presi- Tyler, who died a member of the House of Representatives of the Confederate States Congress?

J. A. Truesdell, of Bluemont, Va., asks The Washington Post (letter published June 26) why there are no photographs of President Lincoln in "a slouch hat." You didn't answer him, but the description he quotes from Elihu B. Washburne is that of the "disguised" Mr. Lincoln, making his entry into Washington covertly to avoid a mythical assassination. That was probably the first and only time Mr. Lincoln ever wore a soft hat.

My friend, Marquis Childs, in his graphic account (June 28) of the visit of tourists to the home and grave of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, says it is remarkable how these people flock to Hyde Park. I dare say, if he should happen to stop in at the Hermitage, the home of Andrew Jackson, he would find the parking space allotted to tourists filled with cars. On my last visit there I counted cars from more than 20 States. And Old Hickory has been dead just 104 years!

Eviction Policies

American eviction policies are almost incredible. When, in time of a housing shortage, eviction is necessary, it seems obvious that families should be given reasonable opportunity to find alternative accommodations, all possible aid in doing so and the assurance of decent emergency shelter until permanent homes can be found. Yet, time and again we read in the papers of families being set out on the street to be cared for only through the mercy of neighbors and relatives. We have the dramatic story of a whole apartment house being suddenly emptied without the inhabitants having had more than a few hours' notice. The helpless families were gotten under roof by nightfall through the kindness of neighbors, relatives and the Salvation Army.

Reports of such incidents should arouse the consciences of thoughtful people to the point of action. Evictions are unfortunately sometimes necessary. But if we have any concern for the values of family life we should make sane and humane arrangements for the care of the evicted. In England I am told that orderly and adequate policies have been established for dealing with such situations, in spite of the fact that the bombing of the war left that nation with a much worse housing situation than we have had.

We must provide adequate temporary shelter for the evicted and we must study all plans for destroying housing (however bad it may be) in the light of present-day human needs. For unless plans for better permanent housing can proceed without destruction of buildings needed during the present period, the psychological cost of our housing program may be more than we can afford.

Right Of Investigation

A pronounced case of hysteria against all forms of investigation is rapidly developing in this country, at least in the most articulate quarters. The wholesome belief that "a public office is a public trust" and that stewardship can always be made accountable has given away to the belief that our Government appointees are in a class by themselves—untouchable, sacrosanct.

Whenever anything is uncovered which seems to cast discredit upon them, immediately a certain breed of commentator rushes to the rescue. The public is assured that it is only natural that a spirited man or woman should have sown a few communistic wild oats. They also solemnly assure us that all investigators are prompted by a desire to "smear" or to cause the subject of the investigation to commit suicide!

Why should we fear the truth? Let there be more and more light, then careful, fair and thoughtful judgment, and finally, if justified, appropriate decisive action. Our Government belongs to every man. Whenever he wishes it he is entitled to an accounting from those men who have been put into places of authority by his vote.

Meridian Hill Theater

At the opening night of Amphitryon 38 at the Meridian Hill Park Theater, I was especially impressed by the audience's enthusiastic reception of this fine play. With its opening to the sky, its fast-moving staging and simple setting, its audience composed of all strata of society united in enjoying good entertainment, the Meridian Hill reminded me of the Elizabethan playhouse. Like Shakespeare's stage, of and for the people, the Meridian Hill will be enriching the lives of Washingtonians with its outstanding plays and performers. I am proud of the advent of such a theater in our Nation's Capital.

Federal Aid To Nonpublic Schools

It seems to me that Cardinal Spellman stated the Catholic position on Federal aid to education quite well in his recent address when he said: "I believe in Federal aid for needy States and needy children, but, unlike Congressman Barden, I believe in help for all needy children, including Catholic children whose parents prefer to give their children religious education."

Your two editorials of June 22 and 25 and Monsignor Spence's letter of June 25 about the Barden school aid bill have made it very clear that the proposed law would unequivocally forbid the States to spend any Federal school aid funds for nonpublic school pupils. Mississippi and Oregon, for example, could not use Federal funds to purchase nonreligious textbooks for loan to nonpublic school pupils, even though these two States spend their own funds for this purpose. Similarly, Vermont and Maine could not use any of their Federal money to supplement tuition fees paid out of State taxes to private high schools in towns lacking public high school facilities.

All States would be forbidden to use any Federal funds for bus rides or health aids for either public or nonpublic school children. Hence, the 15 or more States which allow nonpublic school children to ride in public school buses could not use any Federal funds to improve this service. Is it any wonder that many Catholics are opposed to the Barden bill?

The principal Catholic objection, however, is directed at the bill's formula for allocating Federal funds to the States. This formula would divide 300 million Federal dollars among the States on the basis of their total child (ages 5-17) populations, including nonpublic school pupils. Kentucky, for example, would receive $21.58 for every one of its 40,000 or more nonpublic school pupils. But the Barden bill would not allow this State or any State to spend one cent of its Federal funds for the benefit of any nonpublic school pupil—unless the child transferred to a public school. Is it not unjust to force children to attend a public school as a condition for receiving a fair share of school aid money appropriated by their Federal Government?

A just bill is one which would guarantee that a part of each State's allotment of Federal funds would be available to supply nonreligious textbooks, bus rides and health aids for children in both public and nonpublic schools. These are services for which, according to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, public funds may be legally and constitutionally expended to aid all children. Under this type of a bill, money appropriated for all children would benefit all children.

House Bill 1570, which I introduced, is an example of how Federal funds may be made available to children in both public and nonpublic schools, according to the standards of justice to which I have referred.

Washington Calling

Democratic Strategy

IT IS virtually certain that President Truman will veto any labor bill this Congress is likely to send him. Short of a totally unexpected reversal, the labor legislation adopted by the Eighty-first Congress will bear the stamp of the coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

What this will do is to put the issue of the Taft-Hartley Act right square into the 1950 congressional campaign. And that is not causing any sorrow in the President's inner circle. In fact, when the news of the 44 to 46 defeat of Senator Scott Lucas' amendment to knock out the injunction process reached the White House, it would have been hard to find even the becoming and conventional disappointment such a setback should have produced for public consumption.

In spite of the bad showing of the present Congress, with its nominally Democratic majorities, the President and his shrewdest advisers are not at all downcast by the political outlook. There is a quiet optimism based on a three-point approach to the major issues that will figure not merely in 1950 but in 1952.

THIS OPTIMISM is not dampened by the continuing dissension in Republican ranks. As the Republican strategy committee met here for a session pointing to next year's contest, the chief news was the resignation of Thomas E. Coleman of Wisconsin, wealthy manufacturer who has also demonstrated his astute political judgment. Coleman's public resignation was in protest at what he said was the failure of the strategy committee to develop a strategy.

As for the Democrats, they feel that their strategy is now clearly defined and they are mapping their campaign accordingly. Point No. 1 is the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Democratic managers know that a Republican-Dixiecrat labor bill, containing most of the Taft-Hartley features and, above all, the hated injunction, will be a red rag to the labor bull. That in itself is enough to assure the intensive efforts of organized labor, both AFL and CIO, to get out a big Democratic vote in the off-year election in '50.

Incidentally, some of the Republicans know this, too. As he strode off the floor after the 44 to 46 vote Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon said:

"You just saw several Republican Senators committing suicide."

A ringing presidential veto message would be a major campaign document for next year. Even the tiny minority of labor bosses who still cling to their Republican faith could hardly be expected to champion the proponents of the injunction.

POINT NO. 2 in the Democratic strategy is the Brannan farm plan. The groundwork for a broad appeal to farm voters was laid at the recent conference at Des Moines, Iowa.

Highly significant is the new approach to the Brannan plan. The Administration is, in effect, saying this:

"All right, we've heard a lot of criticism of the plan. But we can't just do nothing. So let's have a trial run. Let's try out the Brannan technique on one commodity and see how it works."

It is therefore being suggested to Congress that authority for a "trial run" on hogs would be satisfactory to Secretary Brannan. Hogs give Brannan the authority. The Department of Agriculture will apply the technique of making production payments to hog raisers while prices for pork products to the consumer will continue to drop.

The bill just reported out by the House Agriculture Committee gives much broader authority. It is at least three fourths of the Brannan plan. The Democrats on the committee voted for it and the Republicans voted against it.

Point No. 3 in the Democratic strategy is based on the Republican vote on Vice President Barkley's ruling to change the Senate by-law covering the right to shut off debate. Republicans joined with Southern Democrats to vote down the change that would have liberalized Senate rules. The Democrats will insist this action made it impossible to get through the civil rights laws backed by the Administration.

Three big blocs of voters—labor, farm, Negro—are the objectives. If the strategy is sound, and the Democratic planners believe it is, then the party in power has a running start for the next race. And the party out of power had better come up with something pretty positive if it ever wants to get back into office.

Hawaiian Plea

That two-page plea in your June 24 paper is a heart-breaking one and is contributed by all the peoples of the Hawaiian Islands. They are in dire circumstances and bitter and discouraged because of the lack of interest and action by their Government. My sister's husband, who has been an accountant with one of the "Big Five" for 11 years, has been so shaken by the whole situation—the fear that his family will be starved out—that he is even thinking of leaving the islands.

Can't your honest and judicious paper arouse some interest and help among our Congressmen and members of the executive department? Surely this is an emergency!

Matter Of Fact

Enter Keynes' Ghost

TAXES ARE likely to be the big news in the semiannual report on the state of the Nation's business, which the President will send to Congress in a week or so. Mr. Truman's long-standing request for a four-billion-dollar tax increase will then be almost certainly withdrawn. And although Congress has never had the faintest intention of voting tax increases anyway, this action of the President's will have considerable psychological importance.

Furthermore, it is quite possible that the President will also flash a green light for repeal of part or all of the wartime excise taxes, which now yield 1.5 billions of annual revenue to the Treasury. And this is an invitation to which Congress will undoubtedly respond with delighted alacrity, if it is even timidly proffered.

Thus, the President will in effect approve the budgetary unbalance which is already predicted, and may even act to widen the gap between revenue and expenditure. This, in itself, will certainly be significant. Yet there will be even deeper long-range meaning in the other points which the President is also expected to make in the same message to Congress. If the document follows the pattern that is now emerging in a series of anxious White House meetings, these points may be condensed under two headings.

FIRST, the President will acknowledge the business recession, and will assert that the recession makes it even more urgent to enact every one of the measures of his January program, except the tax increases and anti-inflation controls. Housing and Federal aid to education, the broader social security base, the minimum wage bill, and the rest, will all be presented as tending to sustain or raise more purchasing power, and thus to halt the downward economic trend.

Second, the President will firmly oppose any present reductions in Government spending for useful purposes, as being deflationary in tendency.

Possibly these tentative forecasts may be falsified by the outcome of the debate at the White House. The chief men now working with Truman on his message are Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, White House Counsel Clark Clifford and the members of the Council of Economic Advisers (who are simultaneously struggling over their own semiannual report). This is a group with more divergent views.

Cuts in public spending have already been openly advocated by the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, Dr. Edwin Nourse, in his famous speech at the Defense Department. There is every reason to believe that Dr. Nourse was encouraged, on that occasion, by Treasury Secretary Snyder. But if the President now prefers the different advice of Dr. Nourse's Economic Advisory Council colleague, Dr. Leon Keyserling, it will not be the first time. And it will probably not be the last.

WHAT seems to be happening, in fact, is an event of the utmost long-range import. It would be hard to imagine an Englishman whom President Truman would have found more repugnant than the late Lord Keynes, with his high Bloomsbury manner and accent, his dry wit and his cool intellectualism. Yet the President seems to be about to commit himself and his Administration, publicly and positively, to the famous Keynesian economic theory.

By now, any college sophomore can recite the basic, once revolutionary, thesis of Keynes, that the state ought to try to control the economic cycle by heavy taxation and deflationary penny-pinching in boom times, and by compensatory, pump-priming spending in bad times. In the New Deal years, the theses was acted upon. It is about to be acted upon again.

The trouble is that the Keynesian theory is emphatically not accepted, either by the majority of the business community or by the majority of Congress. It is very dangerous business, this split national personality. It produced a gigantic tax reduction during the recent inflation, when Keynes would have required the opposite. It now seems likely to carry us into heavy deficit spending, because the economic curve has turned down.

The fault is certainly not the President's, who fought the Republican tax bill with great courage. The President's Keynesian record is consistent. But it must be realized that the delicate machinery of the Keynes theory, if used only when convenient, is quite likely to destroy the user. And this is now what is happening.

George Clashes With Truman Over Taxes

By the United Press

President Truman and Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.,) clashed sharply over taxes and Government spending yesterday as the Treaury ended a fiscal year deep in the red and a drive opened in Congress to cut luxury taxes from their wartime high.

Mr. Truman, who wants taxes raised, asserted at his news conference that Senator George never has wanted taxes high enough to run the Government.

George said in reply that, despite Mr. Truman's attitude, "I'm satisfied Congress will not increase taxes at this session."

"I think he (Mr. Truman) is almost the single supporter of the theory that rates ought to be increased," George said.

George is chairman of the tax-handling Senate Finance Committee which voted yesterday to cut excise levies as a boon to business and buying power.

The bill would reduce Federal excise taxes, which amount to a sales tax, on telephone and telegraph bills and purchases of many items of daily life.

The wartime rates, still in effect, run from 10 to 25 per cent of the purchase price. They are levied on such things as travel tickets, jewelry, furs, luggage and ladies' purses, cosmetics, cameras, light bulbs and theater tickets.

The fiscal year end also saw these other developments:

1. A move by House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts to by-pass the House Ways and Means Committee and get action, through a petition, on a similar luxury-tax cut bill he introduced months ago.

2. A Treasury statement showing that up to June 28 the Government spent $795,706,768 more than it has taken in since last June 30. The statement actually showed receipts were higher than spending—$37,915,099,869 income and $35,710,860,638 outgo. But, the spending figure didn't include a three-billion-dollar surplus from last year which was carried over for spending this year on the European Recovery Program.

3. Continued congressional wrestling over how to cut Mr. Truman's 42-billion-dollar budget to prevent the Treasury from going still deeper into the red in the fiscal year that starts today.

With more than 26 billion dollars of appropriations yet to be acted upon, the Senate approved and sent to the White House yesterday a stop-gap resolution that will let all Government departments continue spending at present rates until July 31.

Plans Ready For Fairfax Sewer Project

Fairfax County officials have completed plans for a three-million-dollar sewer project in Sanitary District No. 1 and are pointing toward a district referendum in two months on a bond issue to finance it.

Plans for purchasing and extending sewer facilities in the thickly settled 30-square-mile strip bordering on Alexandria, Arlington and Falls Church were approved by the county supervisors Thursday.

County Sanitary Engineer James J. Corbalis, who has spent nearly two years planning the work, has called a meeting July 7 at 8 p. m. at the county courthouse where he will explain the project to district community leaders.

Funds Division

The three million will be spent as follows, Corbalis said:

(1) $460,000 to buy from the Federal Government 32½ miles of trunk and sub-trunk sewers it installed during the war, running from Falls Church southeast to the Potomac River. The county now rents these lines from the Government.

(2) $1,105,000 for construction of an eight-million-gallons a day capacity sewage treatment plant at West Gate, just off Fort Hunt rd., south of Belle View Apartments.

(3) $1,138,000 to construct 44 miles of new sub-trunk and collecting sewers in the district.

(4) $117,000 to purchase 30 miles of sub-trunk and collecting sewers installed by private builders.

(5) $180,000 for interest during construction, purchase of operation and maintenance equipment and other expenses.

Additional sewers will be installed as net revenues permit, Corbalis said.

There are now about 25,000 persons living in the District, Corbalis said, of whom 11,000 are served by existing facilities. The immediate project will bring facilities to about 5600 more, he said.

Corbalis estimated that by 1980 the district's population will exceed 70,000, of whom 81 per cent will be served by the system.

Four sources of revenue to finot affect houses already connected.

1. A monthly service charge of $1.50, which would be a 50-cent reduction in the rate charged by the Government.

2. Tax levy of 20 cents per $100 assessed value on real estate in the district.

3. Connection fee of $3 per front foot, with a maximum of $300 and a minimum of $150. This would not effect houses already connected.

4. Continuing, but revising upward, the contract with Falls Church, whereby the city pays $2 a year for each city home using the leased sewer.

French Reactions to Big Four

PARIS.—The most remarkable feature of the Four Foreign Ministers Conference, which ended in Paris June 20, was the lack of interest displayed by the otherwise very alert Parisians. The Parisian press made a great effort to give the best possible coverage of the conference in the Pink Palace. But in vain! The Parisians refused to be interested in its proceedings and to get excited over its results.

They made a few wisecracks about the conference which cannot be translated into English, they recognized with satisfaction that an international conference was another tribute due to the French capital and devoted themselves to their routine work and traditional enjoyment of the Parisian spring and early summer.

The Parisians are much less interested in international affairs than they were a year or two years ago because they have a feeling that the danger of Word War III has been shoved off. They have a feeling that the Russians are much less dangerous than they appeared to be a year or two years ago. So they are much less interested in what Mr. Vishinsky may have to say on behalf of his master.

ON THE other hand, Americans certainly do not behave like "dreaded imperialists." The Marshall Plan which a year ago was received with mixed feelings—it raised as many suspicions as hopes—has now been for more than a year in operation but there is no "economic enslavement" in sight. The man in the Parisian street who a year ago feared the Russians and suspected the Americans begins to feel reassured. The end of rationing—and of the black market—greatly contribute to increase a feeling of comfort which he has not experienced since the prewar days.

Prices are still very high. The discrepancy between wages and prices is still very great. But it is pleasant to know at least that the time for the fantastic profits the farmer has been making since the liberation is over. A great social injustice ended—and this is certainly a relief to the unfortunate city dweller who for several years has lived with a feeling that he was milked by the farmer. Now the shoe is on the other foot. The French government is promising to the grumbling farmers that the prices for industrial products will be brought down shortly.

TREHE IS certainly a feeling of "back to normalcy" in the Parisian air this summer. People are much better dressed than they have been since the liberation. And no more does one require black-market profits to afford a decent meal.

But above all there is a subconscious desire to forget everything pertaining to war, occupation and even liberation. To be sure, the French are very proud of their liberation heroes. They have celebrated the memory of General Leclerc, refusing to De Gaullists opportunity of transforming this celebration into a political demonstration. But they would like to forget if possible both those who collaborated with the Nazis and those who resisted them.

The trouble is that the real heroes of the Resistance have always hated to show off, while some people who jumped on the Resistance band wagon when American tanks were rolling on the Normandy roads have been parading all those years as the alleged heroes of the Resistance. The man in the street does not feel eager to discriminate between the real and faked heroes. He wants to forget. He feels that the road to normalcy runs across the land of forgetfulness.

And he welcomes the crowds of American tourists in the Parisian streets because they greatly contribute to strengthen his feeling that everything is getting just the way it used to be in those happy prewar days.

Poll Majority Thinks Truman Will Seek Reelection in '52

Princeton, N. J., June 30.—Will President Truman run again in 1952?

When asked that question at his press conference two weeks ago the President replied that he had no comment.

But the majority of voters questioned in a national poll express the opinion, or "hunch," that he will run. Republicans in the poll are even surer than Democrats that he will be a candidate again.

The vote follows:

"Do you think President Truman will be a candidate for reelection in 1952?"

Think he will	57%
Think he will not	32
No opinion	11

Here is the vote of those who classify themselves as Democrats, Republicans or independent voters:

	Democrats	Republicans	Independents
Think he will run	57%	63%	49%
Think he will not run	31	30	38
No opinion	12	7	13

Another poll, conducted among a comparable cross-section of voters, put the question in a slightly different way, as follows:

"Who do you think will be the Democratic candidate for President in 1952?"

In this poll, too, President Truman ran way ahead of anyone.

An interesting news sidelight in the results is that Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who was recently elected to Congress, got the second highest number of votes.

The totals follow:

Harry S. Truman	40%
Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.	8
Alben W. Barkley	2
Dwight Eisenhower	1

The "others" mentioned included: Dean Acheson, Chester Bowles, Louis Johnson, Scott Lucas and James Roosevelt.

Two-term Amendment

The proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution limiting the Presidency to two terms would not apply to President Truman even if it were ratified by 1952.

The proposed amendment, or article, states that "this article shall not apply to any person holding the office of President when this article was proposed by Congress."

The article was adopted by the House of Representatives in February, 1947, and by the Senate in March, 1947.

Natural Gas Ordered for Hagerstown

An initial decision ordering natural gas service for Hagerstown, Md., was filed yesterday by Examiner Clifford R. Snider of the Federal Power Commission. It is subject to review by the full commission.

The order directs Manufacturers Light & Heat Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., to connect its natural gas facilities with those of Hagerstown Gas Co., and provide natural gas for the latter. The project will involve construction by the two companies of 6.7 miles of pipeline costing approximately $220,000.

This would replace expenditures of $435,786 for expansion of gas manufacturing facilities at Hagerstown if natural gas is not provided. The latter expansion was termed "not feasible."

The order said an annual $109,000 saving should result for the Hagerstown company and also "substantial savings" to consumers. The Hagerstown Gas Co. also supplies the communities of Funkstown and Halfway, Md.

House's Face Red; It Made Mistake In Housing Bill

A red-faced House yesterday discovered it had passed just the public housing bill President Truman had asked—but by mistake.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) told reporters it is now up to Senate-House conferees to cut the number of public housing units from the 1,050,000 units the President asked for to the 810,000 the House thought it passed.

The mistake occurred when the House tied itself up in a bundle of parliamentary red tape as it passed the huge national housing bill, 228 to 185, yesterday.

Priests Score Birth Control Drive in Japan

Rome, June 30 (NYHT).—Fides, one of the Vatican's unofficial news agencies, charged today that "American experts" are trying to turn Japan into "a scientific laboratory" for the spread of contraceptive birth control.

The Fides (faith) agency is edited by priests. The article was published tonight in the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

The article agreed the rapid rise of population is one of the most serious problems facing the Allied occupational authorities in Japan. It indicated the solution is to reduce race prejudice throughout the world and to make necessary changes in national frontiers.

A priest on the Fides staff said underpopulated countries, including the United States, should make changes in immigration laws which discriminate against Asiatic countries and should make more generous food distributions. He added that Catholic recommendations never would go to the extreme of demanding that fortunate nations like the United States reduce themselves to the level of countries like China.

Credit Controls In U. S. Now Ended

By The Associated Press

All consumer credit controls, long since thinned down to a shadow of their wartime stature, died at midnight last night.

Officials here doubted that their ending would make much immediate difference in terms to time buyers.

In most respects, terms were as easy or easier than prevailed in the days before controls.

Any changes, it was suggested at the Federal Reserve Board, are likely to bring a lower cash down payment than the one-third required by controls in buying automobiles.

Rhode Island Ave. Extension Plan Gets Top Priority

Proposed extension of Rhode Island ave. through the towns of Hyattsville and Riverdale to the Baltimore pike has been given top priority for consideration by the Prince Georges advisory board to the county commissioners, Chairman E. A. Merkle said yesterday.

Merkle said the advisory unit already has engaged an engineering firm to make a survey of the proposed extension, which would parallel the Capital Transit Co. car lines between Hyattsville and the Baltimore pike at Riverdale. When an analysis of the survey is complete, he added, the plans will be presented to the county commissioners.

The new road would provide an alternate route to the heavily traveled Baltimore pike at a point where it passes through several incorporated towns.

Burgman's Son To Testify Here In Treason Trial

The Justice Department was directed yesterday in District Court to take depositions of three witnesses for Herbert John Burgman, 52, accused of treason, and agreed to bring his son here for the trial October 10.

Burgman, a former clerk at the American Embassy in Berlin, is accused of broadcasting Nazi propaganda during the war over a radio station entitled DEBUNK.

The son is Thomas Burgman, of Darmstadt, Germany.

According to defense attorney James J. Laughlin, the witnesses will testify that the elder Burgman was "mentally unstable" at the time of the broadcasts.

McCrea Seeks Meeting on Transit Deal

C. L. McCrea, leader of the group opposing the sale of a controlling interest in Capital Transit Co. to a group of Floridians, said yesterday that he had sent a formal letter to the directors of the Capital Transit asking them to call a special meeting of stockholders to consider the transaction. He also has sent a letter to the Securities & Exchange Commission asking that its decision arising from the hearing held on June 28 be deferred until such a meeting has been held.

Officials of Capital Transit declined to comment on the matter.

McCrea said that he had circularized 350 stockholders of the company and he estimated that those who replied owned approximately 22,000 shares. Another group, headed by James F. O'Donnell and his son, who oppose the plan, were said to represent some 18,000 shares.

The group which proposes to purchase the stock is headed by L. E. Wolfson.

Stocks Rise Further on Small Volume

New York, June 30 (AP).—A painfully slow advance carried through in the stock market today for the second day running.

Buying interest never got beyond the lukewarm stage, but it was enough to lift prices fractions to around a point.

The laborious upward movement, which had its periods of shakiness during the day, showed signs of faltering toward the close.

More individual issues appeared on the ticker tape today than yesterday but traders showed the same lack of enthusiasm. Only 580,000 shares changed hands, against 590,000 Wednesday.

The Department of Justice filed an antitrust suit against duPont, General Motors, United States Rubber and others. Not even the stocks of the companies directly affected reflected the Government's action.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Thur.	Wed.
Advances	480	420
Declines	174	197
Unchanged	268	239
Total issues	922	856

Most observers in the financial district felt that tangible results of the suit, if any, would not be felt for a long, long time.

Du Pont closed ¼ point higher at 46¼, General Motors added ½ at 56¼, and U. S. Rubber lost ⅜ at 35⅛.

The only influence the labor news had was in a negative way. Many brokers claim that a major brake on trading activity has been a desire to await the outcome of current labor-management negotiations.

Magnavox, recently pushed to a 1949 low, put on a show of strength wth a rise of ⅝ to 7. Demand was stimulated by earnings figures released by the company.

Autocar jumped a full point to 5⅞ following announcement of a contract with New York City for 200 heavy duty truck chassis, a $750,000 deal.

Arnold Constable took off on a tack of its own and reached 16¾, high price of the year, with a gain of 2½.

Others higher included Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Studebaker, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, Bell Aircraft, American Telephone, Commonwealth Edison, Anaconda Copper, Kennecott, American Smelting, General Electric, Johns-Manville, Philip Morris, Radio Corp., International Paper, Southern Pacific, Nickel Plate, Sinclair Oil, Richfield Oil, Mission Corp., United Air Lines and Twentieth Century-Fox.

A bit lower were U. S. Steel, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Schenley, American Woolen, Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—A late sell-off in wheat and rye left the grain market with a ragged appearance today. Rye ended with losses extending to more than 4 cents, July losing the most, while early gains in wheat were completely wiped out.

Some rains in the spring wheat and rye territory of both the American Northwest and Canada caused part of the selling. More important as far as rye was concerned was the news that more than 600,000 bushels of cash grain would be delivered on July rye tomorrow.

Wheat closed ⅜-1¼ lower, corn was ¼ lower to ⅝ higher, oats were ⅞ lower to ¼ higher, rye was 2½ to 4½ lower, soybeans were unchanged to ½ higher and lard was 10 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The wheat market started out strong on a rush of buying orders. This mainly resulted from announcement of June 15 parity at $2.17 a bushel, unchanged from the previous month. It was assumed this would result in a loan level on 1949 crop wheat at $1.96 on a national basis.

Advancing prices in the futures pit were helped along by gains in cash grain. Prices here advanced about 2 cents.

New York Cotton

New York, June 30 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm today in fairly broad trading, stimulated by a number of developments construed favorable to the market. Final prices were 25 to 95 cents a bale higher.

Buying of new crop months was spurred by the unexpected unchanged mid-June cotton parity which raised traders' ideas on the loan for the cotton crop. The loan will be based on the mid-July parity. Traders had looked for a lower June figure.

Madrid advices confirmed reports that Spain has practically concluded an agreement with United States shippers under which it will buy initially some 60,000 bales. Deliveries are to begin in July at the rate of 10,000 bales monthly.

The range follows:

$341,526,616 June Clearings Set Record

Clearings of members of the Washington Clearing House Association during June totaled $341,526,616, compared with $325,501,821 in the corresponding month of 1948.

Clearings for the first half of 1949 aggregated $1,878,275,354, against $1,790,004,851 last year.

The monthly total represents the highest figure on record for June and the six months figure is also the highest ever for a first half year.

These totals are the more impressive because the trend in such figures, along with the decline in commodity prices and employment, has been downward in most instances in other communities. The June figure is notable also because it is only moderately less than the total for last December of $341,864,958. December is traditionally a month of heavy clearings because of Christmas trade.

One possible explanation for the high June total is the fact that many quarterly income tax payments are made then.

Monthly figures for the first six months of 1949 and of 1948 follow:

	1949	1948
January	$296,546,165	$300,050,588
February	283,991,625	251,136,377
March	334,414,022	308,815,679
April	300,751,165	322,440,133
May	321,045,759	282,060,251
June	341,526,616	325,501,821

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

MIDSUMMER holidays are upon us, and regardless of rumors to the contrary, Washington offers most any kind of entertainment you wish.

Dorsey

If you're an amateur beach comber or dance band fan you'll appreciate Chesapeake Beach's Saturday night offering of Jimmy Dorsey. The ballroom on the bay is flanked by amusement park contraptions, food, drink, and beaches.

Another of the same type is Glen Echo, where Sammy Ferry and his seven pieces play for dancing every night.

If you're planning on taking a drive this weekend, Olney Inn or Normandy Farm would be a delightful destination. At Potomac, Md., Normandy Farm has the real thing in French cooking.

2 Bills Benefiting Federal Workers Passed by House

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate two Federal worker bills which are:

(1) The Lesinski bill to give additional benefits to Federal workers who are killed or injured in line of duty, and (2) the Murray bill to extend annual and sick leave on a pro-rata basis to part-time Federal workers on regular tours of duty.

The Lesinski bill would increase the maximum amount in both disability and death cases from $116-a-month to 75 per cent of salary, depending on the number of dependents. It would wipe out the present dollar ceiling on benefits. Minimum benefits of $112.50-a-month for disability and $150 for death are provided in the bill. The bill carries a schedule of so many weeks pay for the loss of limbs, eyes, etc. This provision is retroactive to January 1, 1940. An increase from $200 to $400 in burial benefits also provided.

The Murray bill would benefit upward of 10,000 charwomen and other employes who work regularly on a part-time basis. It would give them annual and sick leave in proportion to the hours they work. Also, it would approve leave and payment for leave already given to these employes. The Comptroller General ruled a year ago that these employes weren't entitled to annual and sick leave. Many of these low-paid employes had to repay the Government for leave they had been given.

NO PAYLESS PAYDAYS: Congress took care of that problem yesterday. It passed and sent to the White House a resolution which will allow Federal agencies to spend money for salaries and expenses even though their budgets are still tied up in Congress.

The fiscal year ended last night. The 1950 budgets are supposed to become effective today. But Congress has taken final action only on these bills: Labor-Federal Security, Agriculture, Treasury, Post-office, and its own legislative appropriation. It will be at least another two weeks before the money bills are through Congress.

VA: The Veterans' Administration has given cash awards to these employes for economy suggestions: Henry B. Corley, Mary S. Heald, Wilfred Jordan, Ellen S. Kehoe, William R. McMullen, Irene Parsons, Margaret M. Peck and Mary K. Stillwell . . . INTERIOR: John S. Wood, its purchasing officer, retired yesterday after 40 years of Federal service. He was commended on his outstanding work by Undersecretary Chapman.

JOBS: The Internal Revenue Bureau is planning to hire 1500 new employes immediately. But all of the new jobs will be in its field offices, mainly in collector and revenue offices. The new appointees will be chosen from Civil Service eligible registers.

A total of 4250 new Revenue jobs are authorized in the conference report on the Treasury budget bill. Most of the new employes won't be hired until after next January. As the bill first passed the House, only 1500 new Revenue jobs were provided for but the Senate insisted on the full 7000 as recommended by the President. The conferees compromised on 4250.

NOTES: The oldest Federal worker in point of service retired yesterday. He's Thomas H. Rossbottom who served Uncle Sam 62 years. He's from New York City and he was vice president of the Panama Canal Railroad Co. . . . William H. Weed, chief of the printing and duplicating section at the Office of the Housing Expediter, yesterday was given an in-grade promotion for "superior accomplishments" on his job . . . Bill Shepard is to be appointed an assistant to State Undersecretary James Webb. He has been in Paris with Economic Cooperation. Before that he was Webb's personal assistant at the Budget Bureau.

CAPITOL HILL: At a meeting yesterday of the House Civil Service Committee, Representative Miller (D., Calif.) was made chairman of a subcommittee on the Klein bill. The measure would end veterans preference in layoffs for employes with 15 or more years of service . . . Representative Davis (D., Ga.) is chairman of a subcommittee to consider the Senate-approved Cain bill to require veterans to earn a passing mark on Civil Service tests before preference points are added . . . House Democratic Leader McCormack announced that the executive pay bill would be brought up in the House next Thursday.

We Get the Birds . . .

PHOTOGRAPHER'S REPORT:—When the gentleman of the press who made this picture stuck his head inside the cage and uttered a command "get closer together" both birds obliged (he says) and struck this pose. The feathered pair are Giant Caciques, common in the area between Paraguay and Southern Mexico, but rare in captivity. The birds—their names are pronounced Ka-seek-ehs—grow to be a foot long. In their native habitat, the Caciques nest above water in overhanging trees, utter loud discordant cries and lay 2 to 5 eggs, greenish or bluish-white

More Funds Called Need By Wurster

New Park Chairman Cites Bigger Budgets Of Other U. S. Cities; To Keep Two Posts

The new chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday attacked the inadequate planning budget of the commission as his first problem.

"Our budget must compare more favorably with those of other cities," declared William Wilson Wurster, a member of the commission since last year. He was elected chairman at the morning meeting.

"The average 1949 budget for 13 large cities is $129,000. San Francisco's budget stands at $198,000, while Los Angeles has a budget of $355,000. The District has only an appropriation of $84,700. Yet we should be the leader, not the lagger," he said.

Replaces Grant

Additional funds would provide for more technical staff members, he added. He said the commission here has only 16 employes compared to an average of 27 in the other 13 cities.

Wurster

Wurster, who replaces Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d as chairman, said he will continue as dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology school of architecture and planning. He said he will have to work out a plan so he can do his best on both jobs. He is also engaged in private practice.

Future meetings of the commission will be for three instead of two days so out-of-town members will have more opportunity to get first hand knowledge of Washington's problems, Wurster declared.

He said he will discuss with the commission the possibility of opening the meetings to the press.

Participating in his first commission meeting yesterday was Hilyard R. Robinson, appointed to a six-year term by President Truman yesterday to fill the vacancy created by Grant's retirement.

An architect in private practice here for 14 years, Robinson is the architect for Howard University and has designed a number of its buildings. He has offices at 1927 11th st. nw. and lives at 3531 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Other Business Transacted

The commission transacted the following business yesterday:

1. Discussed the Maryland Park and Planning Commission's subdivision plan for property adjoining the District line west of 16th st. nw. This might mean expensive road grading. Another problem is that the Maryland property is zoned for multiple family housing and the District property is zoned for single family housing. The commission told the staff to work on this with the Maryland group.

2. Discussed traffic problems created along the Mount Vernon Highway by subdivision of adjoining property. The commission will make a field trip for a firsthand view of conditions.

3. Voted to rescind its approval, as of 1942, of the sale of Western Market, at 21st and K sts. nw., since market rents now make it a paying proposition for the District. Wurster pointed out that the market is an old landmark and that he hates to see buildings of even minor historic importance sold.

4. Voted against naming of any park road for Ohio, since all other streets named after States are in the District proper, following the original plan of Thomas Jefferson.

5. Approved removal from paper plans of highways in the National Arboretum and those forming part of Western ave. and Parkside dr.

The commission was given summary drafts of four phases of the comprehensive plan so commission action may be expedited. The meeting will continue today.

Captain Martin lives with his wife, Mrs. Sofia Martin, at 1807 N. 14th st., Arlington, Va. Their son, John S. Martin, jr., is first cellist in the National Symphony Orchestra. U. S. Board Starts Probe Of Gas Rates In D. C. Area

Power Commission Promises Action If Charges Are Not Just, Reasonable

A complete investigation into rates, charges, classifications, and other practices of the Washington Gas Light Co., and two of its subsidiaries, was ordered yesterday by the Federal Power Commission.

The inquiry, begun on the commission's own motion, is "to determine . . . whether . . . any rate, charge, classification . . . is unjust, unreasonable, or unduly discriminatory."

The commission's order also announced that if such conditions are found it intends "to determine and fix by appropriate order just, reasonable and nondiscriminatory rates."

Some observers last night said that the FPC action could result in substantial rate reductions for consumers in the greater Washington area. A Washington Gas Light Co., spokesman, however, took the position the FPC could adjust only the rates on gas at wholesale. He said if a wholesale cut should be ordered, than local or State regulatory bodies would have to adjust retail rates.

Complaint From Arlington

The investigation, though on the commission's own motion, sprang from a complaint made April 25, 1948, by the Arlington County Commissioners against rates charged by the Rosslyn Gas Co., wholly owned subsidiary of Washington Gas Light.

The complaint alleged Washington Gas Light is profiting 20 cents per 1000 cubic feet of gas, minus a small transporting charge, for a 16-mile pipeline haul in Virginia. The 16-mile haul is made by Potomac Gas Co., another WGL wholly owned subsidiary.

Washington Gas Light and Potomac Gas answered the complaint May 23, denying the charge. The FPC took no further action on that case, to date, according to its docket. Instead, it ordered the investigation and created a new case on its docket.

The FPC included the Prince Georges Gas Corp., another wholly owned subsidiary of WGL, in its investigation. Though it did not cite Rosslyn Gas for the inquiry, it made a summary of the Arlington complaint on Rosslyn's rates a part of the facts leading to the order.

Importance of the proceeding is shown by the list of organizations served with copies of the FPC investigation order. They include, in addition to Washington Gas Light and subsidiaries, the Governor of Virginia, Governor of Maryland, State Corporation Commission of Virginia, Public Service Commission of Maryland, and the D. C. Public Utilities Commission.

WGL and its subsidiaries changed over from use of manufactured gas to natural gas in 1947. At that time, in the District, WGL went before the Public Utilities Commission to terminate a "sliding scale" agreement under which rates were set. WGL said it did not want a rate increase for at least a year.

However, last May 4, E. J. Boothby, president, testified before the Senate District Committee that the company expects "in the very near future" to seek an increase in rates. He was testifying in support of a bill to permit revision of the firm's 101-year-old congressional charter.

Agitation in Arlington

Agitation has been continuing in Arlington for a reduction in gas rates ever since the changeover to natural gas. The county board's formal complaint to the FPC averred that Washington buys natural gas from the Atlantic Seaboard Corp., delivered at Dranesville, Va., for 33 cents per 1000 cubic feet. After putting the gas through the pipes of its Potomac subsidiary for 16 miles, the complaint said, Washington charges Rosslyn, its other subsidiary, 53

Cases of Polio Third Higher Than in 1948

Federal Statisticians Say Local Picture A Little Brighter

Infantile paralysis statistics released yesterday by Federal statisticians showed a total of 2718 new cases this year to the week ending June 25. This was an increase of a third over last year's total of 2006 for the same period.

New cases reported last week totaled 409, also an increase of about a third over the 309 cases tallied during the same week of 1948.

Locally, the statistical picture was brighter. The District reported no new cases last week to add to three so far this year; Maryland had one new polio case for the week, to make a total of 14 this year, and Virginia recorded three cases in the week, to bring its total to 13.

Last week's national toll of 409 new cases of the dread disease was contrasted in the Public Health Service report with a five-year median expectancy of 125 cases for the week. Similarly, the year's total to June 25, 2718 cases, was ranged against the five-year median of 1123 cases which might be expected statistically.

Because of the unpredictable aspects of polio, however, statisticians who collect the figures and pass them on to State health officers for their guidance released them without prophesy or explanation.

Only Texas, California and Oklahoma, the records showed, have reported more than 100 cases since the seasonal low point, in March. Texas, with polio somewhat epidemic in Tom Green County, had recorded a total of 577 cases since the March seasonal low, which is still only 19 more cases than reported for the same period last year.

Comparable figures for the other States were California, 169 to 249 last year, and Oklahoma, 139 to 16 last year. North Carolina had only 28 cases for this year's period, in contrast to 244 for the start of its epidemic in 1948.

Truman Urges Sesqui Despite Refusal of Funds

President Truman said yesterday that he hoped the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission would go ahead with plans to celebrate Washington's 150th anniversary.

He told reporters at a White House news conference about his meeting with the commission earlier in the week. He said he urged the members to put on the celebration in spite of the fact that the House refused to approve a Federal appropriation to finance it.

Mr. Truman said he had suggested the possibility of a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. But that, he pointed out, would require permissive legislation from Congress.

"Did you suggest that they get a loan from the RFC?" he was asked.

Mr. Truman said that, no, he had suggested that they ask Congress for permssion to get a loan from the RFC.

Hold Budgets To '50 Level, Fowler Edict

New Taxes No Cause For Overoptimism, Departments Told

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District department heads were directed yesterday to keep their budget estimates for fiscal 1951 down to 1950 levels except for inclusion of high priority capital improvements.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, in a six-page edict approved by the Commissioners, warned the officials not to get too optimistic about increased revenue from the new taxes going into effect on August 1.

Raise to Boost Costs

He warned that operating costs would rise because of the $330 a year pay raise legislation.

The reference to a limited green light on construction came in a quotation from the Senate Appropriations Committee report on the 1950 appropriation bill. The quote was that "consideration should be given to the application of the sum of approximately 5 million dollars, in addition to the amount normally provided, for needed capital improvements, such as schools, welfare institutions, sewer projects, and others of high priority."

Public Works Proposed

Commissioner Guy Mason has already proposed adoption of a public works program for such construction using the added revenues deriving from new taxes.

The department heads were directed to submit 15 copies of their estimates for fiscal 1951, which begins July 1, 1950, by not later than July 29 so the extensive project of pruning and modifying the city government budget may get under way.

The officials also were directed by the Commissioners to prepare three copies of a "detailed report" on activities of their department during the fiscal year ended yesterday for submission by September 1.

Krug, D. C. Officials Confer Today on Segregation Policy

Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug, the District Commissioners and District Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender will meet today to seek a solution to the problem of segregation in recreation.

Krug scheduled the meeting for 11:15 a. m. at his office as the Anacostia pool remained closed on his order following disturbances Tuesday and Wednesday. There were no incidents at any pools yesterday.

President Truman had no comment when asked at his press conference if he had anything to say about the pool situation.

Today's meeting will grapple with the "broad picture" of recreation in the District, an Interior spokesman said.

High on the agenda is a proposal to turn the entire Interior recreation system—including Anacostia and three other swimming pools—over to the Recreation Board. The transfer depends on the ability of the various groups to reach agreement on the segregation issue.

Nub of the problem has been Interior's insistence in the past that none of its play areas—pools, golf courses and playgrounds—will be turned over to the Recreation Board unless the board bans all segregation in its activities. This the board has refused to do.

Wender said last night he saw "no reason a solution can't be reached that will be eminently satisfactory to a majority of the people of the District, to the Commissioners, Interior and our board."

He said the meeting would "permit us to discuss the issues which have plagued the administration of recreation because of the inability of the Recreation Board and Interior to agree on a policy."

Wender made it clear he could make no commitment at the meeting for his board but he promised to carry any recommendation to his seven-member group as quickly as possible. The next regular meeting is scheduled for July 12, but he has authority to call a special meeting. Six of the seven members were reported to be in the city last night.

The Commissioners have a representative on the Recreation Board. Some time ago they and Krug were called to the White House by President Truman to discuss the District segregation issue and were told to work out a solution looking toward its eventual end in recreation.

The Recreation Board on June 14 refused to wipe segregation from its by-laws but approved, 5 to 2, a statement of policy pledging "every possible and realistic effort" toward ending segregation in such time and manner "as may be consistent with the public interest, public order and effective administration."

The city has eight public swimming pools. Two are run by Recreation as white pools on white playgrounds. The six others are controlled by Interior. For several years the department's policy has been that the pools were open to members of any race. But, in fact, by community custom, two have been used by Negroes and four by whites until they opened this summer.

Then Negroes began using two of the formerly white pools—Anacostia and McKinley. Anacostia was closed after two days of trouble while attendance at McKinley has fallen off. At McKinley yesterday only four white swimmers and about 20 Negroes used the pool in the afternoon and it closed when they all had left by 4:45 p. m.

The pool problem is complicated because Interior has turned its six over to Recreation for morning instruction and free swimming periods. The Recreation Board has operated these programs on a segregated basis.

In the afternoons, the pools are operated, for a fee to swimmers, by Government Services, Inc. GSI was ordered by Interior to permit anyone to enter who bought a ticket. It was during these afternoon periods at Anacostia that trouble occurred. At McKinley, the Recreation Board turned back to GSI the morning period after Negroes entered to participate in free swimming.

Pool Row Puts Off Trial for Assault

A Municipal Court assault trial was postponed yesterday until July 29 because of the "tension" resulting from recent disturbances at the Anacostia swimming pool.

The delay was granted by Judge Ellen K. Raedy in the case of John S. Richardson, 21, 6201 Shadyside ave., Capitol Heights, Md. He was accused of trying to run down a 17-year-old Negro youth with an automobile near an entrance to Fairlawn Park.

Defense Attorney Harry Ahern said that he believed that the current "tension" would make it difficult for Richardson to get a fair trial.

Also postponed was the trial against Toussaint P. Pierce, 22, of 2564 Sheridan rd. se., charged with disorderly conduct as a result of the swimming pool disturbance. Pierce was listed as a Negro student.

Policeman's Leg Broken During Chase

A Washington motorcycle policeman's leg was broken last night in a chase that led into Hyattsville. Two men are in jail here charged with assault and a third was reported booked in Hyattsville.

At 6:10 p. m. police received a call that a truck driver was threatening another man with a pistol in the 1900 block of Bladensburg rd. ne. Pvt. Eldon E. Kitchen, 23, the motorcycle officer, and other police units were dispatched.

Roadblock Set Up

The truck driver fled, police said, with Kitchen in pursuit. As the chase went toward Hyattsville, police there were notified and set up a roadblock.

They stopped a large tractor-trailer driven by Herman C. Reed, jr., 26, Chebanse, Ill. They said Reed was armed with a .45-caliber pistol. He said he had been threatened with a knife by a man. After considerable radioing between Hyattsville and District police, the latter arrested Richard Dade, 38, of 469 Florida ave. nw.

Assault Is Charged

Both Reed and Dade were held last night at the Ninth Precinct Station, each charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Meanwhile, Private Kitchen, chasing the tractor-trailer truck, collided with an auto, Hyattsville police said, was driven by Richard E. Proctor, 21, of 4302 Jefferson st., Hyattsville.

Police there said they booked Proctor on charges of reckless driving and failing to yield to an emergency vehicle.

Board Votes Working Budget Of $13,720,000 for Md. U.

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP).—After a session with President H. C. Byrd, the Board of Public Works today approved a $13,720,000 working budget for the University of Maryland.

Dr. Byrd can start spending the money Friday, the first day of the 1950 fiscal year.

Altogether, Byrd submitted an annual budget of about $14,500,000, based on state appropriations and estimated Federal aid and other revenues.

Governor Lane and Treasurer Hooper Miles quizzed Byrd on details of the massive 213-page document before voting to approve it, with two reservations. Comptroller James Lacy, third board member, was not present.

Approval of about $780,000 was deferred. Most of this deduction was earmarked for use later as part of a psychiatric hospital building fund.

Budget Director James Rennie, who spent a month plowing through the thick book, recommended approval.

Byrd submitted a statement which said it would be impossible to predict exactly how much money the university could expect to take in.

He said for example that the university had received special grants totalling $185,000 since the working budget was prepared, and he expected more.

His statement detailed estimated new revenue figures to "account for the tremendous increase in the working budget over the previous working budget" submitted to the 1949 legislature.

The board adopted a resolution submitted by Lane which calls on Rennie to query 47 other States for budget information. Maryland's procedure in dealing with the university's budget will be compared with the methods of handling State university budgets elsewhere.

Some legislators have contended that Byrd did not tell them the full story of anticipated revenues before they decided how much money to appropriate for the university.

The president told the board that his latest budget for 1950 "gives a complete financial picture."

Handyman Drowned in Pool at Club

A 31-year-old Prince Georges Country Club handyman was drowned early yesterday in the club's swimming pool, in the presence of fellow employes who said they had refused to accompany him into the pool for an unauthorized early morning swim.

Jerome Ray, of Highland Park, Md., employed at the club on a part-time basis, was pulled from the water at 1:30 a. m. by S. Walter Bogley, a club official who was attracted by the cries of Ray's companions. He was pronounced dead an hour later by Dr. J. T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, who issued a certificate of accidental death.

Meldin Tate and Jack Roberts, the companions who live near Ray's home, told police they all went to the swimming pool around 1 a. m. Police said all three men climbed a three-foot fence surrounding the pool. Tate and Roberts told police they refused to go into the water, but called for help when Ray sank to the bottom of the pool. Bogley, who was in the clubhouse nearby, gave Ray artificial respiration unsuccessfully for about 20 minutes, before notifying police.

4th of July Weekend Travel May Set New Record for City

Transportation officials were set yesterday for an exodus of Washingtonians bent on a three-day Fourth of July weekend which may break all local air and motor travel records.

Cloudy weather was predicted for today, when most weekend travelers are expected to leave the city, but the Weather Bureau said indications for the weekend generally are for sunny, warm and humid weather, with scattered showers.

Extra sections are scheduled by all airlines and 15 to 20 extra sections will be run by the railroads out of Washington, beginning at 2 p. m. today. United Airlines reported an all-time high in bookings here this weekend, while Capital Airlines announced 19 flights will be added to regular schedules to and from Washington. Its reduced-fare air coach flights are sold out, Capital said.

Travel inquiries received by the American Automobile Association indicate an increase of 20 per cent over last year in motor travel from the area. A number of the more popular hotels at nearby Virginia and Maryland beaches have been booked solid for four or five days, officials said.

Many motorists are apparently adding a couple of days to the three-day holiday, the AAA said, and plan trips to New England, New York State and Eastern Canada in many instances. The three-day travelers are heading more toward West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland resorts.

Bus companies also reported a large number of inquiries showing travel will be heavy today and over the weekend. Incoming weekenders apparently will not be as numerous, as hotel rooms here were still available generally.

For those staying in Washington for the Fourth, the Monday evening celebration at the Monument Grounds, including a giant fireworks display, will be the highlight. Tickets at $1 for adults and 60 cents for children are on sale at the American Automobile Association, the Willard Hotel, the D. C. Information Center in the lobby of the Evening Star building, at GSI snack bars in Government buildings and at the Peoples Drug Stores at 5500 Connecticut ave. nw., 7820 Eastern ave. nw., 1100 G st. nw., 661 Pennsylvania ave. se. and 3521 12th st. ne.

District Has 16% Fewer June Brides

Sixteen per cent fewer marriage license applications were filed here this marrying month of June than during the same month last year.

The decrease follows a Nation-wide pattern of declining nuptials since the all-time high of 2,300,000 in 1946, according to a report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

This June 1163 couples got marriage licenses here. In June 1948, there were 1387, in June 1947, 1477, in June 1946, 1614, and June 1945, 1168.

But the current figures are still almost double ten years ago when during June 695 couples got licenses to marry.

On the national level, statisticians estimate that 1949 will see 1,600,000 couples take the plunge as compared to 1,815,000 last year.

Board to Probe Area Gas Rates

ents per 1000 cubic feet. Out of this 20 cents must come only the cost of the 16-mile transit.

The Washington and Potomac companies denied these allegations. They said deliveries directly from Dranesville to Rosslyn at Arlington are "on limited occasions only" and that this has "not yet become a continuous practice."

They said Washington Gas Light actually charges Rosslyn Gas Co. 51.7 cents per 1000 cubic feet of 1100 BTU (a standard of heat content) gas, from whatever source the gas comes, and that other charges beside the 16-mile transit enter into the arrangement. Washington Gas Light denied there was any discrimination or injustice in the rate.

No Sign of Rate Cut

"The existing rates as filed with the Federal Power Commission," a gas company spokesman said, 'are based on cost of gas to the Washington Gas Light Co. Such cost includes the amount paid by Washington to Atlantic Seaboard Corp., for gas purchased, plus the costs of operating storage, transmission and standby facilities, and a proportionate part of the cost of amortizing certain manufacturing plants which were abandoned when natural gas was introduced. These plants previously had been used to produce gas for use in the District and Virginia, as well as Maryland.

PUC Authorizes Issue Of Gas Light Co. Bonds

District Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized the Washington Gas Light Co. to sell two million dollars' worth of 3 per cent mortgage bonds by private sale.

The commission felt "it is extremely doubtful that a lower cost could be obtained by requiring a public offering at competitive bidding" and therefore waived the bidding requirement.

'The Fountainhead' Will Likely Be a Hit

THE FOUNTAINHEAD. Directed by King Vidor; produced by Henry Blanke; screen play by Ayn Rand, from her novel; music by Max Steiner. At the Warner.

THE CAST

Howard Roark	Gary Cooper
Dominique	Patricia Neal
Gail Wynand	Raymond Massey
Peter Keating	Kent Smith
Ellsworth Toohey	Robert Douglas
Henry Cameron	Henry Hull
Enright	Ray Collins
Chairman	Moroni Olsen
Alvah Scarret	Jerome Cowan
A Businessman	Paul Harvey
The Superintendent	Harry Woods
The Dean	Paul Stanton

WHEN Ayn Rand wrote a preposterously absurd novel several seasons ago, she called it "The Fountainhead." A luridly impossible melodrama, it was a tremendously smashing success with the American reading public. We predict that the same reaction will occur with the movie version which has been brought to the screen by the Brothers Warner and is now on view on 13th and E.

The basic theme of the book and the picture is, fundamentally, a well-chosen one. A man of integrity must never compromise his ideals; he must maintain his intellectual and artistic freedom even in the face of social disapproval and disgrace. That is a dream of all of us: to be rugged individualists, not run with the herd, be the unique personalities which we are, no matter what the price.

True, in most cases the price is too high, so compromise is the answer. But not for Howard Roark, the brilliant architect who is the hero of Miss Rand's novel. Gary Cooper plays the talented idealist whose architectural forms remind one of Frank Lloyd Wright: extremely functional in a classically severe yet modern exterior. His struggles to get his ideas accepted in the face of opposition like the New York Banner, a newspaper run by Raymond Massey, against the staid and dull members of his own profession; against the powerful, fascistic architect-editor, Elsworth Toohey; against society itself, constitute the action of the picture.

Marries Enemy

The love interest of Howard Roark is the headstrong Dominique Francon, played by Patricia Neal. She loves Howard but marries Gail Wynand (Massey). Reason: she loves Howard. Crazy? See "The Fountainhead!"

Howard, after blowing up a settlement project in the heart of Manhattan, eventually gets to build the highest building in the world. But not before Gail Wynand blows his brains out after having tried to help Howard win his battle against the State.

A Warner's publicity release says Cooper is being mentioned for an Academy Award for his portrayal of Howard Roark. He does a great deal to make much of the absurdity of the picture half-acceptable: he plays with that studied earnestness we've come to expect of him over the yeas.

Raymond Massey's newspaper is that of a cynical, sardonic, embryo Fascist beneath whose crooked exterior is a heart of shining gold. It's a caricature of a character; Massey has been given nothing to work with, so his enactment of the role is a strenuous one. We felt for him.

Miss Neal a Disappointment

As Dominque Francon, Patricia Neal is astoundingly dull. Her attempts to register emotion are as successful as a pickpocket in a nudist colony. All the way through the picture she has one expression on her face: preoccupation. Might we suggest a new occupation for Miss Neal, something different from acting.

Henry Blanke has directed this outlandish concoction. He shouldn't be proud. Max Steiner has created one of his typically obnoxious musical scores: instead of helping to realize the emotional content of a scene it blasts you out of your seat.

As the Great Emancipator once said, "They will little note nor long remember what we said here," so the public will flock to "The Fountainhead" and love it!

JOHN M. COPPINGER.

Skelton's Still Good for Many a Laugh

Little Wrangler	Frank Mitchell

WITHOUT Red Skelton, "Neptune's Daughter," at the Palace, could sink to the bottom of the sea, and no one would miss her. Because of Red, Betty Garrett, and the No. 1 tune on the Hit Parade "Baby, It's Cold Outside," it's good family fare during the hot weather.

In "Neptune," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hasn't varied much from past technicolored, Esther Williams water-logged epics. She's still a better swimmer than an actress (but who wants Stanislavski when Esther is filling the screen with her well-distributed 6-foot frame!).

As usual, thhe plot is highly implausible as are most movie musical-comedy plots; they are merely accidental actions around which are built a series of musical numbers. Granting the convention, "Neptune" has to its credit some very funny pieces of business by the Mad Redhead, Skelton. Matter of fact, we think it's his best work in a very long time.

Mostly Williams

Primarily, the picture is really a Williams vehicle. She and Keenan Wynn are partners in a bathing suit manufacturing concern. Betty Garrett is Esther's man-mad sister who gets a yen for Ricardo Montalban, who is the captain of a visiting South American polo team at a local club.

Never having seen Jose O'Rourke (Montalban), Betty mistakes Red, a masseur at the polo club, for the torrid Latin lover. Girl-shy Skelton capitalizes on the mistake and plays his role accordingly. So Esther tries to break up the romance, becoming entangled romantically with the real Jose, thinking the latter is dating Betty. In the end, after several ruptures, Esther and Ricardo clinch in the fade-out, but not before Eddie Buzzell, the director, has staged a water ballet, a fashion show, a wild Spanish, frenzied musical number by Cugat, and two intimate romantic numbers, one of them, the "Baby, It's Cold Outside," duet.

Standing head and shoulders above everyone is Skelton, who has several hilarious routines which prove that he is one of the finest young comedians around these days. It also proves that a good comedian needs good material and good direction. He has both in "Neptune's Daughter."

Garrett Fine Foil

Betty Garrett is a delightful foil for Skelton's antics. She has a piquant charm and gayety which are constantly a help in any scene in which she appears. Metro has a young woman of considerable talent in Miss Garrett. Also, in the person of Keenan Wynn, who is completely miscast in a straight role. He deserves better roles than this.

Montalban and Williams make an acceptable romantic team; they don't displease with any evident incompetence. What more can we demand of any romantic couple in a technicolored musical?

A mention should be made of the dialogue. Much of it has a brightness which amuses, especially several double-entendres in the early scenes.

Along with the feature, the Palace is offering the most spectacular, stupendous, etc., short subject these twenty-twenties have ever seen. It's an MGM release: "Some of the Best;" scenes from past MGM hits, from present releases, from future releases. It's the most glorified trailer we've ever seen. But it's worth seeing for one scene between the late Jean Harlow and the late Marie Dressler. It's so good, Jean and Marie should be billed above Esther on the Palace marque this week.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BLUE PLATE SPECIAL.

GOLF DEPT.—One of the Nation's good golf shows, ranking only slightly below the National Open, the Masters and the PGA, is the $15,000 Washington Star tournament at Prince Georges this weekend. At stake is not only the tournament title with its $2600 first money, but four places on the U. S. Ryder Cup team and first place among the money-winning pros.

Ben Hogan, still convalescing from his auto accident, is virtually the only pro of distinction missing from the entry list. Sam Snead, Dr. Cary Middlecoff and Lloyd Mangrum head up the glittering field. But neither of them could win the event last year, when Skip Alexander took their measure. Such is the charming uncertainty of big-time golf.

POVICH

The hot figure among the pros this year is young Middlecoff, recent winner of the National Open. And only four years ago he was an obscure amateur. While stricken with an eye infection in 1945, he was given a 45-day leave by the Army Dental Corps. Recuperating at Pinehurst, he played in the North-South Open, became the first amateur to win it. Then it was that he decided to quit dentistry and turn pro.'

WHITE SOX DEPT.—Certainly the most voluble manager in the American League is Jack Onslow of the White Sox. It's getting to be a well-beaten path that Onslow is trekking to the office of General Manager Frank Lane, who had him on the carpet again the other day to soothe ruptured feelings among the White Sox.

Onslow had a run-in with Second Baseman Cass Michaels, probably the most valuable player on the Chicago team, and threatened to fine him heavily, after a loud exchange in the clubhouse. Back in April, Lane had to call in Onslow and Catcher Joe Tipton after an encounter in the Sox dressing room in St. Louis, when Onslow slapped a heavy fine on the catcher.

Onslow wasn't Lane's choice as a manager. He was hired by young Charley Comiskey, president of the club, before Comiskey engaged Lane as general manager. Just a couple of weeks ago, Onslow and Lane had a fiery exchange. Onslow has a two-year contract as the Chicago manager, but there are indications the organization may not be big enough for both Lane and Onslow.

DODGER DEPT.—It's a skimpy lead that the Brooklyn Dodgers are holding in the National League, but the conviction is growing that the Dodgers can't miss the pennant despite the recent acquisitions by the St. Louis Cardinals. Such is the speed, the youth, and the solidity of the Dodgers that National League men are wondering if Brooklyn isn't embarking on a long succession of pennants.

In fact, the suspicion is that the Dodgers are the best club in either big league. Branch Rickey, who was building toward a 1950 pennant, is ahead of his timetable. Former Catcher Gil Hodges has solved his first base problem, and Roy Campanella gives the club a catcher who can hit. Jackie Robinson is having his greatest year, and Ralph Branca has won 10 games against one defeat. Robinson and Pewee Reese are the fleetest things in the league.

Yet the Dodgers are not quite the shoo-in they were a month ago. The Cardinals have been getting a big lift from the former expatriate, Second Baseman Lou Klein, and now Max Lanier, another Mexican jumper, is rejoining the club. The Dodgers will have to rise above this new threat but, happily for themselves, they appear to be the kind of club that can do it.

DI MAGGIO DEPT.—No guy in the 110 years since Abner Doubleday was inspired to lay out a baseball diamond has staged as eruptive a comeback to baseball as Jolting Joe Di Maggio. In his first three games for the Yankees, he has whacked four home runs and tilted the victories to the Yanks.

Di Maggio's return makes necessary new calculations with respect to the A. L. pennant race. He makes the Yankees look more formidable, at a time when the Red Sox, the A's and the Indians were charging on them. With Di Maggio in there, they've already deflated the Red Sox in three straight.

Di Maggio sets the pace for the Yankees. Lefty Mel Parnell, of the Red Sox, had yielded only two homers this season, until Di Mag bumped him. Southpaw Earl Johnson hadn't permitted any, but Di Maggio tagged him, too. If the Yankees could stay up there in front without Di Mag, draw your own conclusions at this point. And it's a safe bet he won't be benched against right-handed pitching.

The Lincoln A. C. routed Kelly Miller Travelers, 8-2, yesterday to retain its hold on a three-way tie for first place in the Junior City Baseball League at Parkside.

Duke Signs Red Auerbach

Arnold (Red) Auerbach, who resigned as head coach of the Washington Capitols last month, yesterday accepted a job on the Duke University coaching staff.

Athletic Director E. M. Cameron said that Auerbach will join the Duke staff this fall as an instructor in physical education and assistant coach in basketball.

The Caps' post has not been filled yet, but Bob Feerick and Bones McKinney are mentioned as most likely successors.

The 32-year old Auerbach has been outstanding in basketball since he started playing at Eastern High School of Brooklyn. He later played at Seth Low Junior College in New York City and George Washington University.

He's credited with persuading Miguel Uline to bring the Caps professional basketball team to Washington.

Waitkus' Lovesick Assailant Insane, Sent to Hospital

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Eddie Waitkus' most fanatical admirer was sent away for mental treatment today almost as quickly as she shot the first baseman in a hotel room 15 days ago.

Between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m. these things happened to Miss Ruth Ann Steinhagen, 19-year-old former typist who bore a secret crush on the Philadelphia Phillies' first baseman for two years:

1. She and Waitkus, who was in a wheelchair recuperating from a .22-caliber rifle bullet wound, met socially for the second time in the FelonyCourtroom of Judge Matthew D. Hartigan.

2. After a brief hearing at which, Waitkus told of the strange assault, Judge Hartigan fixed the girl's bond at $50,000 and held her for action by the grand jury on a charge of assault with intent to murder.

3. The Cook County (Chicago) grand jury voted a true bill which was returned before Chief Justice James J. McDermott of the Criminal Court as an indictment for assault with intent to murder.

4. A Criminal Court jury of six men and six women adjudged the girl insane. Judge McDermott ordered her committed to the Kankakee State Hospital for treatment.

5. The girl was taken to the hospital 54 miles south of Chicago.

Normally the slow moving processes of the law would consume days or weeks in taking a case from the Felony Court.

However, the girl's father, Wal-

Tigers Rout Wynn, 12-6; Take Third

Cleveland, June 30 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers moved back into third place in the American League today on a splurge of 17 hits which snowed the Cleveland Indians under, 12-6.

The Tigers punished four Cleveland pitchers, but starter Early Wynn, big righthander, was charged with the loss, his first of the season against four victories. He was chased from the mound in the second inning.

Rightfielder Vic Wertz poled out his ninth home run, two doubles and a single in five times up to drive in five Detroit runs. Winning Pitcher Art Houtteman got three singles in five trips and drove in two tallies.

Four unearned runs after Third Baseman Lou Boudreau's fumble at the start of the fourth inning gave the Tigers an 8-2 lead, and they coasted on to triumph from there.

Rizzuto Misses Yanks Trip Here

Boston, June 30 (AP).—Shortstop Phil Rizzuto, who until today had not missed an inning of competition with the New York Yankees, will not accompany the team when it leaves at 10 p. m. (EST) tonight for Washington, and a three-game series with the Senators.

Phil had to leave the game in the first inning because of a spasm in his right forearm today. An electro encepalogram test at Massachusetts General Hospital showed no sign of a blood clot in Rizzuto's arm.

Wondrous DiMaggio

—By Herb Heft

JOLTIN' JOE DiMAGGIO, we want him on our side.

By our side, I mean on the American League All-Star team which plays the National League July 12 in Brooklyn.

Unless American League All-Stars Manager Lou Boudreau swings one of his famous shifts, though, we won't have Joe on our side.

DiMaggio

Fans were caught flat-footed by Joe's rapid recovery from a heel spur, and didn't expect him back in action so soon. We voted outfield positions to Tommy Henrich, Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio, Vic Wertz and Dale Mitchell.

If we had known Joe would be ready, we'd have given him a spot.

Boudreau can still save the situation, though. He made a fine pitcher out of Infielder Bob Lemon. All he has to do to get DiMag on our side is to make a pitcher out of him, if only on paper.

Boudreau picks six pitchers for the American League team. Why not pick Joe for his pitching staff?

He doesn't have to use Joe at that position. He can put him in the outfield later in the game. Players have been used out of their regular positions in previous All-Star games. Jimmy Foxx, picked as a first baseman, was used at third one year, and no one griped.

We need Joe in our outfield to give us balance and power.

Of the five American League outfielders, only one, Joe's kid brother, Dom, is a righthanded hitter.

And Joe's record in his first three games warrants his making the club. He's batting .500, and has knocked in nine runs with four homers.

I'm not trying to knock down the American League team the fans picked. I simply want to beat the National League, and Joe's the guy who can swing it.

Marjorie Mac Wins Again

starts this season in the $1000 feature for high steppers.

The 6-year-old mare was driven by Ed (Peg Leg) Jones, Oswego, N. Y., who recently sold her to Washington's William E. Miller for $4000.

Jones piloted her to three straight triumphs at Miller's Rosecroft Raceway before he sold her. Then he won another at Rosecroft where Miller was forbidden to drive by the Maryland Racing Commission because he was a track official. Miller originally was scheduled to drive last night.

But Jones took the reins and won by a length and a half over Johnny Brew.

In the $1000 event for pacers, the seventh race, Pat Hubbard scored a $21.60 upset with Supreme Zimri. Well-backed Nora Abbe, 2 to 1 choice, broke while charging the starting gate and never did recover.

Long shots continued to come in on the fifth racing night witnessed by an estimated 5000 who wagered $224,663.

For instance, the daily double paid a thumping $304.60. It didn't approach the record $869.60 of Wednesday night, but certainly wasn't sneezed at by 30 fortunate bargain bettors.

Charming Comet, Paul Vineyard's 3-year-old filly accounted for the first half and was favored at $9.40 in the wide-open race. Beanery Boy, Hugh Bell's $22.80 outsider, clicked in the second and principally was responsible for the tidy payoff.

Only two other favorites won—Hal Trim ($6.80) in the fourth, and the aforementioned Marjorie Mac in the seventh.

Casualty of the evening was Drver Ben Morrison. His Bud Josedale broke gait badly in the fourth race and broke his hobbles. Morrison pulled up in front of the stands and had to be taken off the track in an ambulance. Extent of his injury wasn't available immediately.

Capital Open Starts Today

Cary Middlecoff, National Open champion; Sammy Snead, PGA, Masters and National Celebrities champion; Lloyd Mangrum, former National Open king.

One of these is expected to win the title in the third annual National Capital Open tournament, which begins today at the Prince Georges Country Club under the sponsorship of The Evening Star.

Middlecoff, Snead and Mangrum not only are the top money winners of the year but they have shown in practice rounds at Prince Georges that the well-groomed course is very much to their liking.

The tournament in no sense will be a three-man affair, however, for most of the big names in professional golf are entered in the competition which runs through July 4.

A clinic with Chick Harbert, Detroit pro, acting as master of ceremonies, concluded the pre-tournament activities late yesterday afternoon. Snead, Mangrum, Otto Greiner, Baltimore; Henry Ransom, tall Texan, and Toney Penna, Cincinnati, participated.

Heintzelman Clips Dodgers' 4-Game Streak, Phils Win, 4-2

Philadelphia, June 30 (AP).—Ken Heintzelman ended a four-game Philadelphia losing streak as well as a four-game Brooklyn winning skein today, pitching the Phils to a 4-2 victory over the Dodgers.

The veteran southpaw scattered five hits for his ninth triumph, his third of the year over Brooklyn.

The Phillies broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning when starter Joe Hatten was knocked out. Richie Ashburn beat out a bunt for his third hit, and when Billy Cox threw wild into right field, Ashburn took an extra base.

Gran Hamner sacrificed and Dick Sisler's second double scored Ashburn. With Jack Banta on the mound, Del Ennis got his third hit to bring in Sisler.

The Phils scored twice in the first inning on a single by Ashburn, Hamner's triple and Ennis' single. The Dodgers tied it in the third on a single by Duke Snider and Peewee Reese's ninth homer of the season.

Weik's Relief Job Wins For Nats, 8-6, Over Macks

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Hustled out of the bull pen before he could throw even one warm-up pitch, Rookie Dick Weik got hot against the Philadelphia Athletics instead and the result was an 8-6 victory for the Nats last night.

The 21-year-old Waterloo, Iowa, right-hander was pressed into action when starting Pitcher Joe Haynes was thumbed out of the game in the fifth inning for arguing over a balk Umpire Charlie Berry called against him.

In his four-and-one-third-inning custody of the Nat pitching score, Weik held the second-place Macks to two runs, both scored in the ninth inning.

He also knocked in and scored a run in the eighth inning, when the Nats broke a 4-4 deadlock with a four-run splurge.

In handing Dick Fowler his first loss after six straight victories, the Nats scored all of their runs after two outs.

Nats Lose Lead

They vaulted into a 2-0 lead in the second inning, but lost it in the fifth as the A's assaulted Haynes for 3 of their 11 hits to move into a 4-2 command. The Nats tied it in their half of the same inning and it stayed deadlocked until the last of the eighth when Weik's single moved in the first of four runs.

With two away, Sam Dente beat out a bunt and went to second a moment later as Al Evans walked. Then's when Weik delivered the tie-breaking hit to score Dente.

Gil Coan followed with a looping fly to short center which neither Sam Chapman nor Nelson Fox could field and Coan zoomed to third with a 200-foot triple as Evans and Weik both scored. Coan then sent the crowd of 8029 into a dither as he stole home with the fourth Nat run.

Weik's wildness cost him the last two A's runs. He walked Fox home. Taft Wright, whose triple knocked in two of the Mack runs in the fourth, drove Moses across with a grounder to Eddie Robinson to account for the last Philly score.

Kozar Blasts Triple

Al Kozar's triple and singles by Dente, Evans and Haynes manufactured the first two Nat runs in the second. In the fifth, Clyde Vollmer's second single scored Sherry Robertson, who had also singled, with the first run and Robinson followed with a single to drive in Eddie Stewart, who was on second, to tie the game again.

After blanking the A's for four innings, Starter Haynes gave up three hits, including Wright's triple, in the fourth which added up to a 4-2 A's lead. Put out over this, Haynes exploded when Plate Umpire Berry ruled that he committed a balk with Ferris Fain on first.

Haynes had different ideas, expressed them in no uncertain terms and thus became the first American League pitcher to be ejected this year.

Weik walked in, and on his first pitch of the game he retired the side, Fanning Sam Chapman, who had two strikes on him when Haynes lost his debate to Berry.

Clipper's Hitting Gives Yanks 3-Game Sweep Over Boston

Boston, June 30 (AP).—The devastating bat of Joltin' Joe DiMaggio did it again today.

The great Yankee Clipper, for the third straight day, crashed a home run in Fenway Park, to lead the league-leading New York Yankees to a 6-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The circuit clout, his fourth since entering the lineup for the first time this season last Tuesday, came with two on in the seventh inning, and provided the winning margin.

The victory enabled the Yankees to sweep the three-game series from the Sox, and put them eight games in front of the club, Yankee Manager Casey Stengel regards as the one to beat for the flag.

DiMaggio's sensation slugging climaxed a three-day hitting spree that gave the star centerfielder a total of 5 hits in 11 official times at bat, and nine runs batted in. His last four hits all have been for the distance. Joe's four-baggers were responsible for the Yankees winning the first two games.

DiMaggio's four homers also gave him a major league total of 307 to tie him with Johnny Mize of the New York Giants for the most round-trippers by an active player.

Vic Raschi, although tagged for a dozen hits, went the distance to gain his twelfth victory against two losses. Vic helped his own cause with a run-producing single in the fourth.

Southpaw Mel Parnell was the first of three Boston pitchers used, and he drew his fourth loss, as compared with 10 victories.

He was shelled out in the seventh when, with one away, George Stirnweiss and Tommy Henrich singled and DiMag scored them both with a shot that hit the light tower atop the left field wall. Parnell then walked Billy Johnson and gave up a single to Johnny Lindell. That was all for the left-hander.

DiMaggio hit into a double play, popped out, walked and was hit by a pitched ball in four other trips to the plate.

Importation Disposes of Longshot

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—Tyson Gilpin's Cacique II, an importation from South America who failed to get in the money in nine races last year, turned in his third 1949 victory here today. The occasion was the Covered Wagon Purse and the 7-year-old gelding came from behind to win going away by an impressive length margin.

The Penn-Mar Stable's Joe's Favorite, in the longshot role, was second, a length in front of Margaret Hickman's Psychic Fancy, odds-on favorite in the field of seven.

The Boyce, Va., owned winner, excellently handled by Jockey Freddie Kratz, paid an $8.60 win mutuel and was clocked in 1:21 2-5 over a fast track and under cloudy skies.

Psychic Fancy, ridden by Jockey Buddy Root, did the expected and went to the front when Starter Harold Holland sent them away. Quick Party and Joe's Favorite were closest to the pacemaker as the field turned into the backstretch with Cacique II in front of only one horse.

Joe's Favorite moved abreast of Psychic Fancy at the far turn and the duo battled head and head. In the meanwhile, Kratz, who had been saving ground with Cacique II, brought the gelding out for racing room and began to better position. In the final drive, Joe's Favorite disposed of Psychic Fancy to take command, but Cacique II came on with a bold rush that collared the Penn-Mar hope in the final 10 yards. The winner was opening daylight at the end.

Schroeder, Mulloy in Doubles Finals

Brough, Dupont Meet For Women's Title

London, June 30 (AP).—The top-seeded American team of Ted Schroeder and Gardnar Mulloy overcame controversial line decisions and two tough Australians today to reach the final of the Wimbledon men's doubles tennis championship.

The Yanks beat peppery Geoff Brown and Billy Sidwell 6—4, 3—6, 6—8, 6—3, 9—7, after escaping from enough close scrapes to last a lifetime.

Capping a glorious comeback, the Americans saved two match points when trailing 6—5 in the deciding set. They were stoutly encouraged by many of the 17,000 usually sedate English fans who demonstrated against what they considered raw decisions by linesmen and umpire.

The other men's semifinal was put over to tomorrow, inasmuch as none of the participants is concerned with the singles final between Schroeder and Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia.

Pancho Gonzales and Frankie Parker of Los Angeles are favored to oust Judge Batty, still another Los Angeles product, and Eric Sturgess of South Africa, and thus make Saturday's final an all-American affair.

Before and after today's two and a half hour men's duel, Mrs. Margaret Osborne DuPont of Bellevue, Del., and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills smashed into the women's singles final with one-sided victories over a pair of less talented Americans.

Mrs. DuPont routed Mrs. Helen Pedersen Rihbany of Boston, 6—2, 6—2, scoring with everything except aces. They were unnecessary. Louise, defending champion, qualified for her third Wimbledon singles final in four years by knocking Mrs. Pat Todd of La Jolla, Calif., off the court in 28 minutes, 6—3, 6—0.

They were tame exhibitions compared with the men's thriller. Mulloy and Schroeder might have bagged the last set at 6—4 except for a disputed line decision in the third game.

The game score was tied at 1 all. Sidwell was trailing 30-40 on his service. He smashed a drive that appeared from the stands to be well outside the baseline.

Brown, Sidwell Bow To American Team

Mulloy and Schroeder were so sure it was out that they started to change courts. The umpire checked them by announcing "Game to Sidwell."

The women's doubles was boiled down on the sun-browned courts to the semifinals. Three teamrs are American and one British.

Mrs. Rihbany and Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, beat Mrs. Molly Blair and Jean Quertier of Britain, 6—3, 5—7, 11—9. Joy Gannon and Mrs. Betty Hilton beat Mrs. P. F. Glover and Mrs. Margot Gordon, 6—2, 6—2, in an all-British quarterfinal.

WAITKUS—From Pg. B5

Jury Calls Waitkus Assailent Insane, She's Sent to Hospital

ter, and her attorneys requested today that she be "sent to an institution without delay." They made their plea immediately after her arraignment before Judge McDermott.

Dr. William Haines, head of the County Behavior Clinic who has consulted the girl frequently since her arrest, told the sanity jury he had examined her daily, "and I have found her insane."

Asked by the State's Attorney John S. Boyle how long she had been in this condition, he replied, "for the past several years."

"Is the disease curable?"

"In some cases, by treatment?"

Judge McDermott then directed the jury to find her insane.

The girl chewed rhythmically on a wad of gum as she stood before the bench and heard Dr. Haines picture her thus:

Waitkus wasn't the first man she had a crush on. Earlier she was "keen" about Franz Liszt and his Hungarian Rhapsodies. Two years later she ditched Liszt and the longhairs for boogie-woogie.

For Waitkus it was his first trip away from Illinois Masonic Hospital since he was wounded on June 15.

After the brief hearing the ball player returned to his hospital. He is supposed to remain there until Sunday for observation. The bullet which wounded him in the chest has not been removed.

After the sanity hearing, Miss Steinhagen told reporters "I felt rather weak after seeing Waitkus this morning."

Bill Cantrell Qualifies For Gold Cup

By Happy Walker

THE DETROIT River was the scene yesterday of qualifying heats preliminary to Saturday's running of the Gold Cup classic, for the coveted 45-year-old mug. The Detroit River Racing Association is the sponsor.

Walker

Average speed of 65 miles per hour must be met in order to enter the Gold Cup contest. My Sweetie, driven by Bill Cantrell, has set the pace so far with 92.406 m. p. h.; Such Crust, last year's President's Cup winner, driven by Dan Arena, qualified at 82.317 m. p. h.; Stanley Dollar's Skip-a-long beat out Arena with 84.373 m. p. h.; Hurricane, Morland Visell's entry, scored 76.06 m. p. h.; while Bandleader Guy Lombardo in his Tempo VI averaged 73.177 m. p. h. All existing records are expected to be cracked by sundown Saturday with some 26 challengers entered.

HERE AT HOME, some 30 stalwart rowing enthusiasts from the Old Dominion Boat Club will leave for Philadelphia at the crack of dawn tomorrow to enter the important Peoples Regatta billed as a championship attraction on Monday.

OUR SISTER State Virginia will entertain a goodly number of local racers, both in sail and power over the Independence Day weekend. Tomorrow Hampton Yacht Club will stage its twenty-eighth annual regatta featuring Star and under class for sails off Old Point Comfort, while at the yacht club, a full schedule of inboards in all classes will be run off. Commodore H. H. "Cootie" Holt and his officials have made reservations for a large number of Washington entries.

Come Sunday, we'll be off to Richmond, where the Virginia Power Boat Association, will stage its annual outboard regatta on the James River with all classes slated in the program. Both the Hampton and Richmond regattas are American Power Boat Association sanctioned events.

ON MONDAY, the fourth, Hampton Y. C. will wind up its three-day affair with a full day's schedule of outboard races which, like Richmond, will draw many of the Nation's top speedboat aces. Not to be outdone, Irvington, Va., will play host to a smaller inboard regatta on Monday, too.

Voiselle Shuts Out His Ex-Mates

New York, June 30 (AP).—Boston's Braves swept a double-header from the New York Giants today, 3-0 and 6-2, to move into a third place tie with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bill Voiselle and Elbie Fletcher, two men the Giants practically gave away, collaborated to win the first game.

Voiselle, traded away by the Giants two years ago for a useless Mort Cooper, blanked his old mates with four hits. It was his sixth victory over them against no defeats.

Fletcher, sold by the Giants to the Braves a month ago, accounted for all Boston's runs. He slammed a three-run homer off Hank Behrman in the fifth.

Glenn Elliott, rookie lefthander, gained his first victory of the year, in the second game, holding the Giants to four hits. Solo homers by Jack Lohrke and Johnny Mize' produced the Giants only runs.

Restelli's Double Wins

Pirates Get Only Four Hits But Still Beat Reds, 2-1

Pittsburgh, June 30 (AP).—The Pirates got only four hits off Howie Fox today, but they bunched three of them in the sixth inning to beat Cincinnati 2-1.

Aside from that fateful sixth, Fox showed the fans a masterpiece of pitching. He cut down the first 13 Pirates to face him, before Wally Westlake tripled in the fifth.

He got the next four, too, and had two out in the sixth when Pete Castiglione and Johnny Hopp singled.

Rookie Dino Restelli then doubled to left center with the deciding blow. Castiglione rode home on the hit, and when a play was made for Restelli at second, Hopp dashed home with what proved to be the winning run.

Cliff Chambers held the Reds to seven hits until the ninth, when Jimmy Bloodworth singled and Grady Hatton doubled, sending Lloyd Merriman, who ran for Bloodworth, home with the Reds' only run.

A ladies' day crowd of 15,140, including 8283 paid admissions, saw Chambers stage his third win of the year while Fox was charged with his seventh loss.

Truman's Former Chauffeur at Lanham Tonight

A driver with a twice-broken back, President Truman's former chauffeur and the race world's newest sensation, are expected to set the pace tonight at the West Lanham Speedway midget races at 8:30 p. m.

George Fonder, of Lansdale, Pa., who fractured his back in the Air Corps and again in a racing crackup, is returning to the Maryland oval along with Len Duncan, a Navy veteran from Brooklyn who drove Mr. Truman around London following the Potsdam conference, and Steve McGrath, the Boston pilot setting a national pace in winning feature events.

Duncan's expert chauffeuring of his little black Offenhauser has made him the No. 1 man of the Lanham track where he has won four out of five 25-lap main events this season.

Martin 202s Remodeled to Correct Fault

By the United Press

Changes are being made in Martin 202 airplanes to correct a "faulty design" which resulted in a crash and loss of 37 lives near Winona, Minn., last August 29, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Civil Aeronautics Board said the "probable cause" of the Northwest Airlines disaster was structural failure which caused the left wing to come off when the plane entered a thunderstorm between Chicago and Minneapolis. Four crew members and 33 passengers were killed.

Structural failures are so rare in air transports that old hands in Federal aviation agencies could recall no other since the one that cost the life of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, near Bazaar, Kans., on March 31, 1931.

The Winona failure occurred, the CAB report said, "as a result of a fatigue crack in the left front outer wing panel attachment fitting which had been induced by a faulty design of that fitting." It said the weakness was aggravated by the turbulence of the thunderstorm but failure would have occurred sooner or later anyway.

The Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, said it now is "voluntarily making permanent corrections in the wing attachment fittings of Northwest Airlines' entire 202 fleet of 24 planes and of six 202's in service in Latin America. Nine planes have been modified, six are in process and the rest will be finished soon, it was said.

Labor Group Adopts Union Rights Pact

Geneva, Switzerland, June 30 (AP).—A world convention to guarantee trade union rights was adopted today by the thirty-second International Labor Conference.

The confgerence approved the agreement 90 to 14, after rejecting a last-minute attempt by the employers' group at the conference to turn it from legally-binding convention into a recommendation with only moral force.

The covenant becomes binding on any 61 member States of the organization whose governments ratify it.

The covenant was the major task of the current conference.

The contradt guaranteed to workers' and employers' organizations adequate protection against any acts of interference "by each other or each other's agents" and called for measures "to encourage and promote the full development and utilization of machinery for voluntary negotiation between employers and workers, with a view to the regulation of terms and conditions of employment by means of collective agreements."

VA Check Delay Won't Affect Washington Area

Washington veterans will not be affected by a shortage of funds delaying checks due nearly 500,000 under the GI bill, the Veterans' Administration said yesterday.

A spokesman for the Washington regional office said the 26,000 checks allotted trainees in the District area would go out as usual. Baltimore veterans, he said, would not be so fortunate, with 6209 checks being held up there.

The current shortage was said to be the result of a 1 per cent error in disbursement estimates, which left the VA four days behind the deadline for its checks.

Expected action by Congress in authorizing payment, amounting to about 48 million dollars, would enable the checks to be mailed out in a few days, the VA said.

He is the author of several articles on diseases of the bone and joint, and is the first resident in orthopedic surgery at Freedmen's.

'Spare Time' Course Seen Forced Out

Increased educational requirements for professional men are closing the doors of schools that educate "spare time" students, John T. Kennedy, president of Benjamin Franklin University, warned last night.

And liberal arts education plus four or more years of professional training, will soon put professions beyond the financial reach of 75 per cent of American youth, he added.

He spoke to the 337 graduates of the school at commencement exercises held at the Statler Hotel.

A liberal arts education is now required of dentists, doctors and recently lawyers, Kennedy said. It now appears that these qualifications be extended to certified public accountants.

This, he said, is a method of depriving students of freedom of opportunity and handicaps those who must earn a living and get an education at the same time.

It also is closing the doors of technical schools that cannot furnish a liberal art course.

In addition, he warned, it will lead to a shortage of professional men, excessive costs for their services, and eventually socialism.

The valedictory address was made by honor student Frederick R. Bagford and degrees were conferred by Dean Edwin C. Bosworth.

53 Receive Diplomas

Fifty-three potential "girl Fridays" last night received diplomas from the Washington School for Secretaries at ceremonies held at the Shoreham Hotel.

The attractive graduates were urged by Robert B. Freeman, assistant director of the Foreign Service Institute, Department of State, to extend their career interests beyond the first job and to acquire a broad general knowledge to supplement their secretarial training.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

To assure receiving this help from your ad writer, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

What's the Verdict?

STOLEN GOLD

Q. The plaintiff owned a gold mine which produced high-grade ore, and a few nuggets. Some workmen would conceal nuggets, and sell them to the defendant, who knew the nuggets were stolen. The plaintiff brought suit, asking that defendant be enjoined from buying stolen gold. Will the injunction be granted?

A. The plaintiff is, in effect, asking an injunction against the commission of a crime. Courts ordinarily will not enjoin the commission of a crime, as such, because if the defendant violated the injunction he would be subject to punishment for contempt of court without a jury trial, in violation of the constitutional right to jury trial in criminal cases. However, if irreparable injury to property is threatened, the court will issue an injunction against a criminal act. Purchase of stolen nuggets would not be irreparable injury. If this case involved uranium instead of gold, the injunction probably would be granted.—F. L. D.

Vacation Dreams

My wife and I forever scheme . . . To travel far and wide . . . Among the mountains and the lakes . . . And all the countryside . . . We plan a dozen trips or more . . . With maps and folders bright . . . And wonderful vacation dreams . . . That generate delight . . . But time goes by and one by one . . . The projects go astray . . . And every wishful star is still . . . A million miles away . . . Or else we start a journey and . . . The places that we see . . . Are not at all as gorgeous as . . . We figured they would be . . . And so I often wonder why We take the time to roam . . . In search of joy that cannot match . . . Our happiness at home.

No Need for More Maryland Judges, Hammond Says

Atlantic City, N. J., June 30 (AP).—Maryland judges and lawyers were told today that there is no need for more judicial appointments.

A special committee had considered whether each of the 23 Maryland counties should have a resident circuit judge. Five of them, Garrett, Worcester, Kent, Talbot and St. Marys, don't have one now.

The committee headed by Attorney General Hall Hammond advised against it at the fifty-fourth annual meeting of the Maryland State Bar Association here.

Hammond said not only is there no need for more judges, but it is considered unwise because the jurists might be unduly subject to local influences.

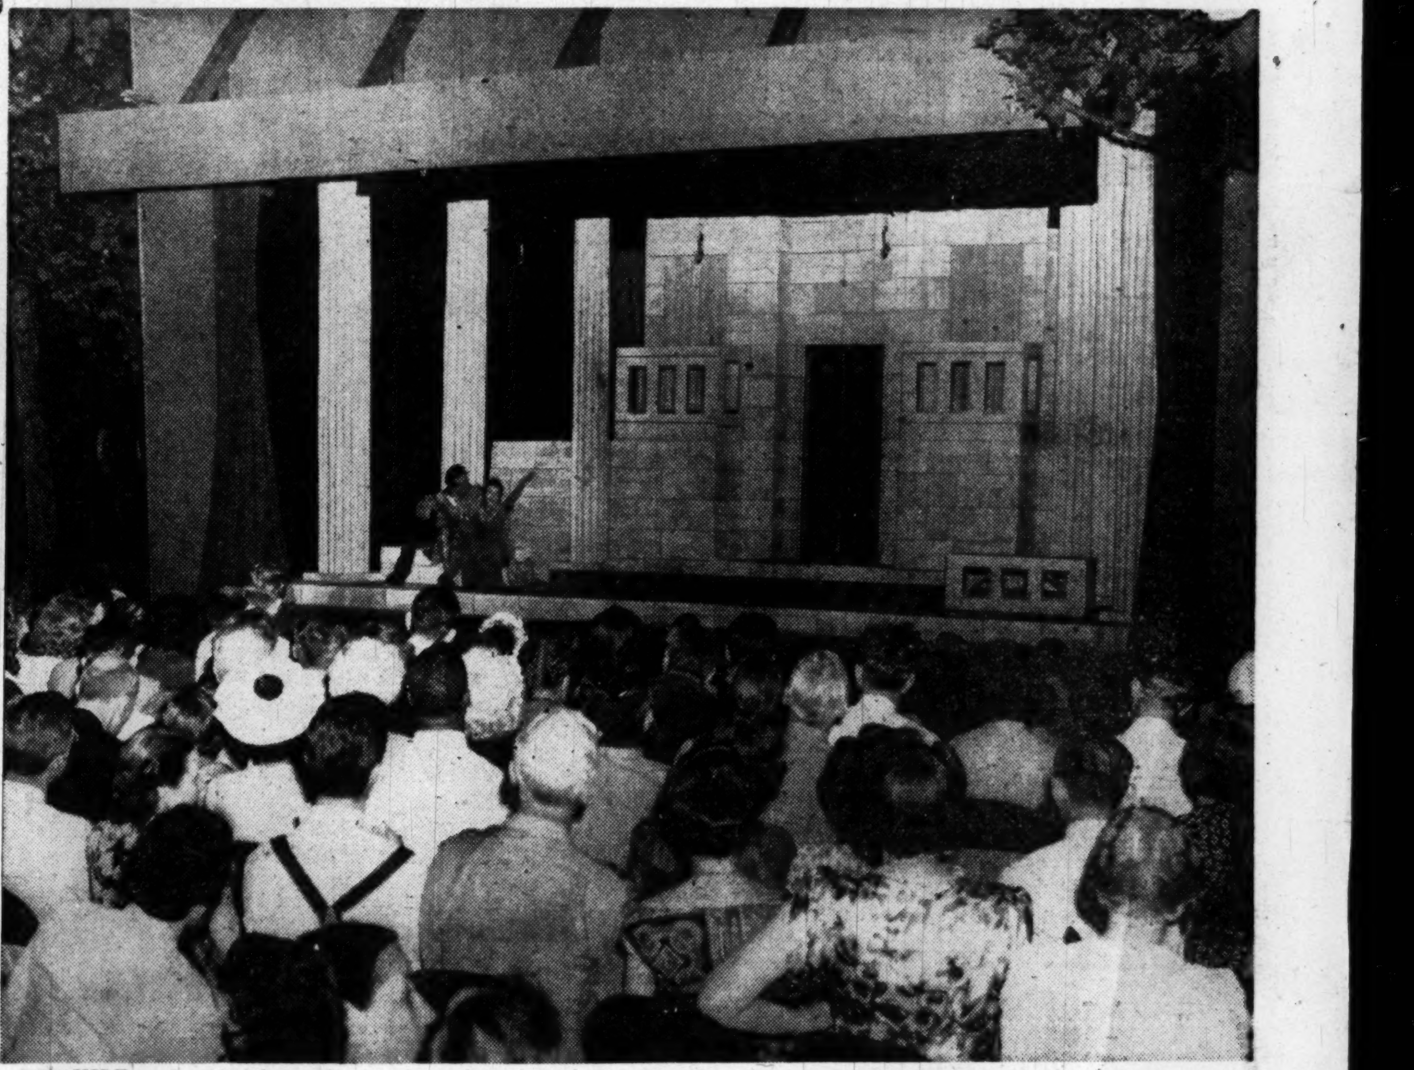
Summer Theater



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

WASHINGTON'S own summer theater opened last Sunday night at Meridian Hill Park to an audience of Congressmen, diplomats, Capital society and just plain theater-goers—all with just one thought in mind: "Isn't it wonderful to see a play again!" Here Mrs. Raymond Clapper is being given the program of the play, "Amphitryon 38," by usherette Mrs. Nell Morgan. Mrs. Clapper is one of the 12 outstanding Washington women honored at the performance

WHILE some 900 theater-happy Capitalites look on, Elisabeth Bergner as Alcmena bids farewell to her husband, Amphitryon, as he leaves for war. "Amphitryon 38" is Miss Bergner's English adaptation of the play Jean Giraudoux had written for her in French. It is the first in a series to be presented this summer by the Washington Theater Festival, sponsored by the newly organized Productions, Inc. The setting for the summer series is the shrub-bordered outdoor theater just beyond the long rectangular fountain-dotted pond near the base of Meridian Hill Park

CURTAIN time minus 10 finds Woody Morgan (left) of Washington, who plays a warrior in "Amphitryon 38" and John Ward of Bayonne, N. J., who has the role of the trumpeter, behind stage laughing off a case of first-night jitters with one of the pretty usherettes, Miss Patience W. Brown of West Hartford, Conn. Mr. Ward is a student at the American University here. Patience studies at the Institute of Contemporary Arts

Does Your Home Displease You? Perhaps You Aren't Compatible

IF YOU ARE dissatisfied with your present home—and a good many Americans are—the chances are it isn't compatible with your personality.

That's the conclusion reached by a group of Cornell University experts and some leading architects whose views are presented in an article in the July American magazine by Dr. Ethel Waring. This expert on home and family, who is a professor of home economics at Cornell, says that even our bodily builds cause difference in home perferences.

For example, the extrovert usually likes a big, imposing-looking house located in an open, commanding spot while the introvert tends to be an isolationist, prefering to live in a house made up of small cubicles.

Athletic type men are inclined toward bold-looking houses with spacious rooms and huge windows, but very thin people feel a strong urge for small, snug homes with steep roofs and small windows.

Likewise, she states muscular men like their homes to be furnished with hard, simple furniture while fat people love overstuffed furniture and general luxurious furnishings.

The American magazine supplements its article with a table showing what the experts think is the type of house which best fits certain personalities. It shows, for instance, that the Georgian house appeals most strongly to formal, rather stiff people who are careful to observe all proprieties and tend to be set in their ways.

The Victorian house appeals primarily to unconvential, nostalgic people who are somewhat annoyed by the slickness and efficiency of modern civilization.

Earthy, sentimental, warm-hearted persons who love to tend to their peonies prefer the Dutch Colonial, and the Regency home is most popular with cool, aloof people who love exquisite detail and formal entertaining.

The Modern house is for bold, dramatic, unconventional people who tend to be extroverted, highly individualistic and somewhat exhibitionistic. And last, but not least, is America's favorite, the Cape Cod, which appeals most to modest, sentimental, romantic, nostalgic, introverted people.

Make Your Own Fine, Dry Bread Crumbs

To make fine, dry bread crumbs, put stale bread into a slow oven to make sure it is dry through and through; then put it through a food chopper, using the fine blade. Store in a covered container in the refrigerator. If there are young children in your family, they'll enjoy taking over the once-a-week task of making the crumbs and using the food chopper. Let them have the fun of learning to put the chopper together and to take it apart as well as of working the grinder.

IF YOU HAVE A SPECIAL LIKING FOR CORNMEAL FLAVOR, you'll enjoy this unusual Sunset Dinner-in-a-Dish. Make the cornmeal base any time, perhaps right after breakfast, and chill. When ready to prepare dinner, assemble and bake in the oven. Make a tossed salad and you have a complete and easy meal.

Sunset Dinner-in-a-Dish

- 1 cup cornmeal
- 1 cup cold water
- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 No. 1 can (about 1¼ cups) condensed tomato soup
- 1½ cups grated cheese
- Pepper rings

Mix the cornmeal with the cold water. Stir corn meal mixture into boiling salted water. Cook until thickened, stirring very frequently. Add onion and green pepper. Cover and cook 5 minutes or longer for white cornmeal (10 minutes or longer for yellow cornmeal), stirring occasionally. Pour into a shallow 7 x 11 inch baking pan. Chill.

Thirty minutes or so before you wish to serve dinner, cover chilled mush with condensed tomato soup. Top with pepper rings and fill these in liberally with grated cheese. (If desired, omit pepper rings and simply sprinkle on generous amount of cheese.) Bake in slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) 20 to 25 minutes. Cut into squares and serve immediately.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

It's the simple things that are often most run for youngsters to play with. The tough string bags in which one buys a dozen or so oranges is a case in point. Parents have found that their children use them for all sorts of activities.

The boys see them as fish nets ir put them on their heads, stick in bits of branches, leaves and other camouflaging material and are marauding Indians or Marine raiders. Girls find that they make find clothes bags for doll play or serve as shopping bags. An imaginative child will find many other uses for the bags, too.

And they are excellent for keeping the small blocks, toy autos, and many other knicknacks that children accumulate. Either stowed away on a shelf or hung from hooks, they make it possible for the room to be kept reasonably neat.

Restoring Lustre to Copper Bowl

I have a hand hammered copper fruit bowl which has grown dull in the two years that I have had it on display in my home. It is also scratched in spots. Is there any way to polish the bowl so that it will gleam as it did originally? Can the scratches be covered? If there is such a process, how often do I repeat it to keep the bowl good looking?

S. S. R.

There are excellent metal polishes on the market which have mild abrasives in them for cleaning and polishing copper. These polishes with abrasives will remove tiny surface scratches, but if the scratches are deep at all I suggest you take the bowl to a firm listed under "platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book. Some of these firms do metal repairing and restoring and can possibly remove the scratches by mechanical buffing. Since this is a decorative piece you may wish to have the firm which restores it apply a lacquer to the bowl to prevent tarnish as long as the lacquer remains unbroken. If the bowl is not lacquered, it should be polished with a good metal polish as often as it shows tarnish. If polished before a heavy coat of tarnish is allowed to accumulate, the job is easier.

How can I improve the appearance of an old brown upright piano? A friend suggested I paint the piano white and then rub it with burnt umber. What are the steps in this procedure?

Mrs. P.

The method you suggest is sometimes referred to as antiquing and it is a very attractive finish for an old piano.

To do it, first sand the present finish to remove all rough spots and smooth the surface. When thoroughly smoothed, wipe surface with a cloth moistened with turpentine to remove oil or grease together with the sanding dust. Then apply a coat or two of white or cream paint and sand smooth when dry.

One coat of glaze is then applied and wiped away almost immediately with a lintless cloth in such a way as to leave the glaze along the edges, in the carvings and mouldings and remove it almost entirely from the raised places. This gives deeper tones to any design on the piano and highlights the smooth surfaces. As a glaze you can use varnish thinned with one fourth as much turpentine, adding burnt umber to give it the color you wish. Or, some paint stores sell already prepared glaze.

I wish to remove the color from some ecru rayon ninon curtains. The color remover I have is "not intended for celanese or acetate rayon." How can I tell whether my curtains are of these types? If they are, can you tell me how I can remove the color?

V. C. M.

The term ninon refers to the weave of the curtains rather than the type of rayon. There are three kinds of rayons: acetate, viscose and cuprammonium. Ninon curtains may be made of any one or combination of any one with cotton. Acetate (Celanese is the trade name for one make of acetate rayon) will disolve when nail polish remover is applied to it or it will curl under a very hot iron. So clip a small piece from the curtain and test it to find out whether it is acetate. If you find the curtains to be acetate or you are not sure from the test, there is a color remover put out by one of the well known dye companies which can be used on acetate as well as other rayons. By reading the directions on one or two of the well known makes of color removers you will easily find it.

I spilled some baby oil on a brand new chambray dress. I have washed it once, not removing the stain. Can you tell me how the stain can be removed?

Appreciative Reader.

Sponge the stain with carbon tetrachloride and wash the dress in soapy water. If this doesn't completely remove the stain, make a paste of carbon tetrachloride and corn starch, rub it into the stain and let stand 30 minutes. Brush away. Repeat if all the stain is not removed the first time.

I have kept one layer of our wedding cake for a future anniversary. It is a heavy dark fruit cake thoroughly soaked with brandy. Can you recommend a way to keep it as long as 25 years? I have considered having it vacuum canned. Can you tell me some local firm (or even one in another city) that would can it for me? At present it has a thick coating of almond paste and icing which help preserve it but prevent further soaking with brandy.

I have not been able to find a firm which will vacuum can the cake. There is a Washington bakery which will re-ice the cake and place it in a metal container for you, but with this preparation they say you can hope to keep it in edible condition for only a year. If you wish the bakery to prepare the cake in this way, it is necessary for you to provide a metal container with a tight-fitting lid. To contact the baker which does this work, call Republic 4478.

Surrounded—Yet Alone

There Were Many Waiting With Judy, Some With Pity, All Savoring 'Sensation'

—By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer—

HERE'S what it was like in the District Court corridors and the courtroom itself Wednesday night waiting, vainly, as it turned out, for the jury to bring in a verdict which would resolve Judy Coplon's fate. Considering the case's importance and unusual public interest, considering Miss Coplon's stake in the proceedings, the atmosphere was disturbingly informal. On the ground floor a brace of shirt-sleeved police sat at a small table answering casual questions with inert disinterest. Half a dozen photographers, a few reporters, perched on desks in the small press room. Almost everyone was eating peanuts, dropping shells nonchalantly, until the floor was crunchily carpeted.

In the third floor corridor, the die-hard Coplon fans queued outside the courtroom door, propping themselves against the wall in solid line. Some sauntered, others gathered in tight knots to swap opinions. Like all crowds attracted by a spectacle envolving emotions dragged into the open, it was made up, for the most part, of the elderly, bulgy ladies, stringy gents.

The Communist flavor was supplied by a few women with cropped hair and mannish suits, several airy couples, one man's upper portions covered only by an undershirt, his feminine companion in slacks with open-midriffed "bra" top. There was, too, the little group of society slummers, dressed refined, and getting a heluva kick out of their daring, dangerous venture.

On the opposite side of a door marked "No Admittance" reporters quizzed FBI agents, court functionaries. Down a narrow hall was the room where the jury was thrashing out its decision. Guarding the entrance, bulldog fashion, were two more hefty minions of the law.

Back in the common corridor, Archie Palmer, the defendant's lawyer, suddenly bobbed up. Short, chunky, his rusty-colored face was creased with fatigue, a lock of black hair hung over his eyebrow. His voice rasped, as he chivvied, genially enough, with reporters. From nowhere, too, Judith Coplon tapped down the corridor in high heels. Thinner than she looks in pictures, not nearly so poised or handsome, her face, with its slightly receding chin and darkly circled eyes, was gray as a tattle-tale sheet. She was wearing a black satin raincoat, the same skirt she had on the night she was arrested, a dark brown cotton T-shirt.

She talked sensibly, intelligently, on trivial subjects. One wondered why she wandered alone through the halls, talking with reporters, members of her claque, instead of remaining restfully in her hotel room until her presence in court was necessary. She is smart, all right, but not too smart.

A nicely dressed, pince-nezzed woman, carrying an armload of newspapers, approached. "They say you went to school with Judy. If you did, in common decency can't you sit with her, keep her company because she's so alone? It's disgusting to see how the men follow after her now."

Reminding the interrogator of the age lapse between Miss Coplon and myself and the fact that Barnard College boasted some 1000 students, I asked why she came to the trial, how she felt about Judy.

"I've just retired from the Government," she said. "I've been an auditor for years. And before going home to Minnesota I decided to come to the trial. I've been here every day, clipped all the newspapers. I know if you commit a crime against the Government you haven't a chance. I'm not saying whether she's guilty or not but I think it's terrible for Judy to be here alone without some woman being with her."

Several of her courtroom pals, circled close, nodded in approval. Judy, herself, hurried towards the door with the "No Admittance" sign. One of the women with close-cropped hair gave her shoulder a pat; another, this one with a shoulder-length bob, managed to plant a fleeting kiss on the Coplon cheek.

IN THE courtroom, aircooled and suddenly filled with row after row of spectators, Judy Coplon sat on the front bench and waited. Her hair was almost out of curl and held back on each side of the center part with a pair of bobby-pins. The pointed nails on her small fingers were minus enamel. She looked crumpled, untense, and singularly unaware of what might happen to her in the next few minutes. She had been reading a rented library book, a Crime Club selection called "Pearls Before Swine."

She passed it back to the press seats, with a laugh, indicating the jacket blurb. It read, "When Albert Champion, lean, tanned, and tired, came back to his London flat from three years service overseas, the last thing he expected—or wanted to find, was a woman's corpse on his bed."

Palmer, depositing his saucer-brimmed straw hat, a Gideon Bible, a half-finished package of peppermints, a mass of yellow, paper-covered legal briefs, jumped again into action. He was slapped down. He turned crossly to Judy "Where did you put that list of jurors?" One felt, that every minute of delay was a gain for his defendant.

When the jury came in slowly, listlessly, this seemed even more sure. The jury sat down. On the back row, a man bowed his head as if asleep. On the front row, two women stared ahead sleepily, apparently hearing nothing. The foreman stood up, his embarrassment was so great at being injected into the limelight—he could scarcely stutter out a sentence. Another member of the jury stood up, asked helpful questions, which the quiet judge answered carefully. The 12 men, and true, seemed numb and totally disinterested. As they withdrew, Palmer jumped to his feet, expostulating mechanically. The judge waved him down. It was a strange scene, the slow-moving jury, the dignified judge, the jack-in-the-box lawyer, tiny, tired Judith Coplon, the whispering crowd, pleased to have another day of free sensation.

Do You Know Why You Eat What You Do?

Food choices are bound up with emotional attitudes unconsciously acquired but grimly held, Dr. Jennie I. Rowntree told home economists attending the annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in San Francisco yesterday.

"Food is eaten because it promises something more gratifying than health," the director of the school of home economics at the University of Washington said, pointing out that food cannot be considered without its psychological interrelationships.

Those who assume that food is eaten for health or because it is good for them are unrealistic, she said, urging her listeners to use psychology to change food habits.

Dr. Rowntree said, "Food is eaten for enjoyment, for emotional release, for social prestige, for attention, adverse or otherwise. Food is refused because of unconscious emotions, for the pleasure of paining others and to show self-assertion."

If young people can be made to believe that food refusals are childish reactions, she said, they will accept new or even disliked foods just to prove themselves emotionally mature.

Emotional attitudes toward food begin in babyhood and it is at this point that psychology can be most effectively applied, according to Dr. Rowntree, who stated that the infant who did not sense affection while he was being fed or who has been distressed or unduly hungry is likely to become a food problem and remain one.

The child who eats well has been blessed with an understanding mother, she continued, stating that if a child anticipates adverse reaction, such as a mother's critical attitude toward his food habits or lack of coordination at mealtime, his actions become subversive and he protests by food refusals.

Advising mothers to consider each addition to an infant's diet as an educational step, Dr. Rowntree said "If we emphasized the difficulty involved in learning to drink from a cup, to get sticky food from a spoon with the tongue, to handle utensils or to accept new flavors, there would be fewer children refusing foods and courting undernutrition."

Culinary Arithmetic

In dividing recipes so as to make fewer portions, remember that there are three teaspoons in a tablespoon and four tablespoons in a quarter of a cup. If it is ever necessary to divide an egg, beat the yolk and white together, then divide by spoonful; a large egg will measure about four tablespoons.

A House Of Another Color

By Ann Pringle

A few months ago someone on my block painted his house gray-blue. More recently the person next door to him painted his bright yellow. It may not sound as though such actions deserve medals, but I think they must have taken real courage.

Ours is a red block. My street is a street of houses that once were privately owned and occupied. Some of them still are, but most of them now contain small, remodeled apartments. Almost all these houses are red brick, bright and glistening when they receive new coats of paint every few years, faded and soft in between times. Some of them have white trim, and many of them have a little trailing green vine at the sides or under the windows.

I suppose it must be considered heresy to break with this red tradition. Repainting the houses red seems to be a kind of sacred rite. I can understand this. The row of red and white houses, trimmed with green vines and set off by green trees here and there along the street, has a certain Old World charm.

But there's something pretty charming about the flash of yellow and the spot of gray along the block, too. Those two houses look bright and carefree

Ignoring Child When He's Good Encourages Him to Misbehave

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

AS PARENTS, we are guilty of a particular way of behaving toward our children. We are inclined to be mum when they give us no trouble and berate and criticize them when they annoy and displease us. This would imply that we expect children to be good and only notice them when they are not.

It also gives the child a completely faulty idea of himself. He comes to imagine that he is more bad than good. The only attention he gets from parents is when he misbehaves. Being avid for attention, children take advantage of this and continue their disturbing behavior because it wins them parental notice. This is true even if the attention is disagreeable and punitive. Better that, they reason, than to be ignored.

In order for a child to grow into a wholesome personality he has to have the admiration, sympathy and understanding of his parents, brothers and sisters. Nowhere, in the whole wide world will he ever again have the same opportunity to be a person of such heroic proportions as he can be to his loving, admiring family.

His ability to withstand the colder, more impersonal treatment of school and business life will stem directly from the feeling of self-confidence he has developed because of living in such a family.

To be torn down, criticized, disapproved in his family undermines the very fibre of his self-confidence and leads to a warped idea of himself as a person. He is forever a dog in the manger, someone who has no faith in himself or his capacities.

When such a child is confronted by the conflicts that are inevitable to daily living, he has one count against him. He is already half licked.

When parents realize the results of their behavior it ought to be easy enough to correct it. They should be on the alert to praise the child, to build him up, to give him a belief in himself.

Even if he is misbehaving and needs correction or punishment, the words or acts should be directed at the behavior, not at the child. He is a good child who has erred. The behavior can be improved, the child is loved whether good or bad.

Because of a child's inferior size, because of his limited knowledge, he is forever at a disadvantage with adults. Parents recognizing this, can make up these disadvantages by their loving, appreciative, admiring estimate of the child. It helps him to become the admirable person they wish him to be.

Better Breakfast Means Better Day

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU don't want more energy and do not need a raise in pay, then just go sleepily along to work with no breakfast to speak of.

But so you will know what you are missing, here is scientific proof that a better breakfast means a better day. In an interesting research study conducted at the medical school of a distinguished university, it was shown that far-reaching benefits result from the habit of eating a good breakfast—increased maximum work output, sustained mental alertness, and lessened muscular fatigue during the morning.

Under controled conditions, a group of young women 22 to 27 years of age were given a hearty breakfast each morning over a period of several weeks. When accustomed to this good morning fare, they were checked for maximum work output; for mental alertness as demonstrated by "reaction time," the time required to make decisions and act on them; and finally for muscular fatigue as measured by the amount of neuromuscular tremor after work performance.

Carrying on the experiment, the group went without breakfast for several weeks and were checked on the three points; and again after starting the day on just coffee with cream and sugar. And finally on a small but balanced breakfast of 400 calories. Here are the results:

Comparison Proves

ON NO breakfast and with coffee only, there was a reduction in work output, a decrease in mental alertness and an increase in muscular fatigue. But when the "coffee only" was changed to an adequate but small breakfast of 400 calories, work output increased greatly, mental alertness picked up and fatigue lessened.

The scientific explanation of why no breakfast or a toast, marmalade and coffee meal only, leads to the well-known midmorning slump is this: the blood sugar drops quickly; and when blood sugar drops, one's energy goes down.

Further research has shown that on a good breakfast, energy holds over into the afternoon even on a light lunch, provided good quality protein is included in the morning meal. Recent work has shown the importance of including complete protein in each meal.

It's a smart girl who gets into the habit of eating a good breakfast, including an egg, toast, citrus fruit or juice and coffee or milk; or cereal and a whole glass of milk in place of the egg.

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

HOWARD LINDSAY, the Broadway star and Pulitzer Prize playwright, would have been a Unitarian minister had it not rained one afternoon in Boston. Mr. Lindsay was a freshman at Harvard when he was torn between the theater and the pulpit. He couldn't decide whether he wanted to be an actor or a minister. His grandmother, who was paying his tuition, told him he could continue at Harvard and at the Divinity School. Lindsay made an appointment with a local Unitarian minister to discuss it . . . That day he wore his ice-cream suit—pale-gray, soft and cool. And just as he was to leave the house, the rain came, in torrents, and would have ruined his suit if he stepped out. He waited till the rain subsided, but then it was too late for the appointment. He left Harvard and enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Art.

THE courtroom reporters who saw Harry Hershfield at the Alger Hiss trial this week told of the Vera Stretz murder trial which was covered by Hershfield. Miss Stretz had shot her Teuton lover, whose body showed five bullet wounds. She was defended by Samuel Leibowitz, and acquitted . . . Her plea was self-defense. And when, during a recess, the presiding judge, Cornelius Collins, asked the reporters: "How could a woman shoot five times, and then say it's self-defense?" . . . "Maybe," suggested Hershfield, "she was hard of hearing."

WHEN Jane Wyman was confronted by the London press, and was asked: "Do you find any great difference between production in London and production in Hollywood?" The film star replied: "In Hollywood the production-staff has names like Jimmy, Spike, Joe and Mary Lou Here they have names like Nigel, Neville, Alisatire nd Angela" . . . The Wesson Bros. bought their contract back from Rooney's film company, and said: "Now we don't have to call Mickey 'Mr.' anymore" . . . Jacobs Differs With Spellman

By Drew Pearson

One Congressman who has vigorously defended North Carolina's Graham Barden from the charge of "bigot" hurled at him by Cardinal Spellman is Representative Andrew Jacobs of Indianapolis, himself a devout Catholic.

JACOBS

Jacobs, a freshman who in six months has made an outstanding record, serves on the same Education and Labor Committee with Barden, where the aid-to-education bill is now bottled up. Citing the late Al Smith on the separation of church and state, Jacobs contends that a great many Catholics disagree with Cardinal Spellman.

"As long as we have the same right to send our children to public school as anyone else, we are not discriminated against," Congressman Jacobs says in a special statement to Catholics. "And as Catholics we do not have the right to a separate, publicly supported school system, nor does any other group of people have such right.

"Whatever can be constitutionally done to aid a child will win my support. However, I cannot and will not support any measure that grants public financial aid to private or parochial schools.

"We have the right to build and maintain our churches," continued the Indiana Democrat, "but not to build or maintain them with public funds. Our parochial schools are an adjunct of our religion, established for educational use instead of using public schools solely for the sake of the child's religious training.

"The issue is clear. Either you keep parochial schools and maintain them or take public funds and convert them into public schools, and they will then no longer serve the religious purpose for which they were established."

Congressman Barden of North Carolina, whom Cardinal Spellman has attacked, is a quiet, hard-working, middle-of-the-roader who is viewed in Congress as anything but a bigot. Actually, he agrees with Cardinal Spellman on many things, especially on the point that the Federal Government should not control education.

Barden is a man of deep, fighting convictions, and one of these is that we must raise our public-school standards.

"I happen to be a Presbyterian," says Barden. "But I don't believe it's the duty of the Government to provide money for Presbyterian schools any more than for the private schools of Methodists, Catholics, Quakers, Episcopalians or any other faith."

Barden was a battler for better education long before he came to Congress in 1934. As a member of the North Carolina Legislature he led the fight for improvement of both white and colored schools. The fact that Negro school teachers are now paid the same as white, and that money is divided impartially between Negro and white school buildings and transportation is due in part to Barden's untiring efforts.

"I am wrong about as often as the next fellow," says the North Carolina Congressman. "But I try to be always sincere. My constituents don't blame me if I make a mistake once in a while. However, if they ever find me wrong and insincere at the same time, I expect them to get after me plenty—and rightly so."

British Business Crisis

Paul Hoffman, the Marshall Plan administrator, held a secret conference with top Government officials last week to report on the British financial crisis.

Britain, according to Hoffman, had bungled its way into a first-class recession that may lead all Europe into a depression and wreck the Marshall Plan. Hoffman was especially bitter about Britain's trade deal with Argentina, said it is typical of the way Britain has refused to practice what it preaches.

He intimated that if Britain doesn't show more signs of co-operation, he may cut off Marshall Plan aid—if Congress doesn't beat him to it.

Defending the Pacific — The joint chiefs of staff have developed an important plan for the defense of the Pacific. They are writing off large sections of this vast area as impossible to defend and will concentrate on holding Japan, India, Burma, Java, the Hawaiian Islands and the Philippines. The plan was approved after a number of meetings with top British and French military men who agreed there was no use in Western powers spreading their forces too thin in case of war with Russia.

THE WASHINGTON "NATS." LEARN HOW TO KNOT A TIE

MILTON LATT GIVES OUR SENATORS THE DOPE DURING A RECENT VISIT

While our hustling ball club can field and slug, they're willing to learn how to knot a tie properly. On a recent visit downtown, eleven of the players dropped in on Coach Milton Latt, Latt's Tie Bar, 910 14th Street, for a demonstration. Needless to say the Senators, like all smart athletes and sportsmen, are Latt Tie fans. Reading from left to right: Paul Calvert, Sam Dente, Clyde Vollmer, Al Kozar, Ray Scarborough, Mickey Haefner, Mickey Harris, Sid Hudson, Al Evans, Sam Mele, Dick Welteroth, John Simmons.
